ENGLAND FROWNS ON ETHIOPIAN DEAL

ACT TO AVERT WAR IS SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

U. S. TAKES "HANDS OFF" POLICY IN ETHIOPIA

BY LLOYD A. LEHRBAS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—A "hands-off" policy toward Anglo-American oil concessions granted in Ethiopia became evident today as President Roosevelt signed a war-avoiding neutrality resolution.

Despite Great Britain's advice to Emperor Haile Selassie to withhold the concessions, state department officials indicated the United States would take no officials steps.

Secretary Hull, after receiving dispatches notifying him of the startling deal as reported by the Associated Press, said the American commercial venture presented no question of involving this nation in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Mr. Roosevelt, while calling the purpose of the neutrality resolution "wholly excellent," indicated some dissatisfaction with the provision for a mandatory embargo on munitions shipments to belligerent nations, which expires next Feb. 29.

'This section," he said, "requires further and more complete consideration between now and that date.

"Here again the objective is wholly good. It is the policy of this nation to avoid being drawn into wars between other nations but it is a fact that no congress and no executive can foresee all possible future situations.

"History is filled with unforeseeable situations that call for some flexibility of action. It is conceivable that situations may arise in which the wholly inflexible provisions x x x might have exactly the opopsite effect from that which was intended. In other words, the inflexible provisions might drag us into war instead of keeping us out."

MORE TROOPS CALLED

Trento, Italy, Aug. 31 (AP)—Premier Mussolini paid a surprise visit today to the town where he was once a newspaper editor and told a cheering populace. "those who do not know how to grasp the wheel of destiny in historic moments perhaps wil never grasp it."

Il Duce drove into Trento after completition of gigantic war maneuvers in northern Italy near Bolzano. There he announced plans to call 200,000 more troops to the colors and warned:

"The world should know yet again that as long as one talks absolutely and provocatively of sanctions, we will not give up one soldier, one sailor, or one aviator."

In his brief but bristling speech here, Il Duce said:

"All those who delude themselves with the idea of arresting or slowing up with miserable politics the forceful march of this young Fascist Italy shall be disillusioned."

His entrance into the town, where he was once in bad repute with Austrian authorities, was that of a triumphant hero.

Measures were announced at Bolzano caling 200,000 men into service in September, which will bring Italy's forces to more than 1,000,000 men. A conscripted class which otherwise would be dismissed at the close of maneuvers will be kept in service indefinitely.

KNOX IS GUEST OF VANDENBERG

Senator Denies Meeting Has Any Political Signifance

Holland, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP)—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R. Mich.) and Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, frequently mentioned as Republican presidential possibilities, were under one roof tonight and the politically mended were skeptical of protestations that the occasion was purely social.

That skepticism was enhanced by the fact that it was George F. Getz, of Chicago, treasurer of the Republican national committee, who brought them together at his summer home, near here.

There have been persistent rumors that Col. Knox has lined up some strong support for the nomination, but Senator Vandenberg has discouraged the friends who have offered quietly to attempt to roundup delegates for him.

Vandenberg Is Host

Senator Vandenberg, who has been resting at the Getz summer home since congress adjourned, was cast in the role of host at an informal party tonight. Getz, Col. Knox and several prominent Michigan Republicans were among the guests.

The senator denied that the gathering had political significance and described his meeting with Col. Knox as no more than a reunion of two personal friends and former Grand Rapids (Mich.) newspapermen.

Michigan politicians had no hopes that a formal announcement of plans would follow any conference held over the weekend. They did predict, however, that a definite understanding between the two men would be reached before Col. Knox and Getz return to Chicago.

Michigan Republican leaders would welcome any hint of such an understanding. Believing that Michigan has its best opoprtunity in many years to supply the Republican presidential candidate, they are eager to get a pre-convention campaign underway, however quietly.

They sa'd there is the nucleus of strong supoprt for Col. Knox in Michigan should Senator Vandenberg indicate that he prefers to remain in the background.

Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg expect to leave for a short European tour in about ten days.

Girl Thrown From Her Horse Killed

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP)—Miss Virena Beach, 14, daughter of A. S. Beach of Ada, Mich., was instantly killed this afternoon when she was thrown from her horse near Ada.

Authorities who investigated the accident said the horse apparently was frightened by two passing motorcycles. The girl's skull was fractured.

DEMO FORCES TURN CONTROL TO OLD GUARD

PATRONAGE DISPUTE IRONED OUT AT MEETING

BY G. T. SHILSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Mackinac Island, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP)—The Democratic party of Michigan claimed today to have made its peace with the high command of the national organization and to have consolidated its once broken ranks.

In response to a message, presumed to have come from the inner circles of the party at Washington, state leaders moved swiftly. The advisory council adopted a resolution unanimously directing that all federal patronage for Michigan flow through the nation[illegible] committee members, the congressmen and the executive committee of the state central committee.

O'Hara Squeezed Out

Spokesmen declared this will end the conflict that has blockaded patronage and caused dissension in state party circles. The action means that the more than two hundred conferees gathered here feel that from now on there is only one faction and one Democratic party in Michigan and that is the one dominated by the so-called old guard. Elmer B. O'Hara, official state chairman, was squeezed out of the picture. If Washington accepts the state mandate O'Hara will have no more to do with patronage than he has had to do with the state organization since the advisory council was set up to strip him of his power.

The heads of organized Michigan Democracy under the new setup will be former Governor William A. Comstock, National Committeeman Horatio J. Abbott, National Committee Woman Evelyn Mershon, former chairman of the liquor control commission Frank A. Picard and their allies.

Word that Washington expects Michigan Democrats to end their bickering and designate a patronage channel was brought by Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska. He was viewed as an administration spokesman. He said he had conferred with President Roosevelt, and it was whispered he was selected by the president personally to contact the Michigan leaders. Burke said he thought action taken by the more or less unofficial conference here would be acceptable to James A. Farley and the president.

The resolution adopted by the advisory council declared dissension in Michigan became marked when Washington authorities began making appointments through other than regular organization routes.

"We desire cooperation from them (President Roosevelt and Farley), not interference, and request that no appointments be made except through regularly constituted channels," the resolution said.

Fitzgerald Attacked

Comstock and Abbott said the action of the conference paves the way for complete understanding with Washington and for unification of the party in Michigan. Arthur J. Lack, former candidate for governor, who at one time was credited with having patronage powers presumably will have little to say from now on. Discontented groups will have to take the dictation of the "regular" organization if national authorities place the stamp of approval on the action of the conference.

In the closing session of the enthusiastic gathering of Democrats Picard took a final, raking thrust at the Republican state administration. He charged Governor Fitzgerald with being ignorant of the laws and procedure in connection with liquor control.

"I am going to nail him on every mistake," Picard continued.

"He is not going to make things established by the Democrats look new and try to claim credit for them as his institutions. He is blowing hot and cold on the situation with the wets and drys."

Nudist Conference Opens In Stockholm

Stockholm, N. J., Aug. 31 (AP)—Though chilly breezes swept over their guarded camp in the fastness of the Hamburg mountains, 200 men and women devotees of the undraped figure met today for the opening of the three-day International Nudist conference.

A luncheon at the camp, which is conducted by the American Gymnosophical Association, opened the annual conference at which Dr. Russell B. Abbott of Cleveland, O., is presiding.

By the remote control of a telephone, the Nudists told the world that Dr. Herman Soshinski, camp director, made an address of welcome and gave a review of activities during the past year.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes Dies in Auto Crash

Sante Fe, N. M., Aug. 31 (AP)—Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the secretary of interior, was killed and Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, well known writer, was injured critically 30 miles north of here tonight in a motor car collision.

New Mexico state police announced the death of Mrs. Ickes and reported the car in which she was riding to Espanola, N. M., near the scene of the crash, had been struck by a "hit and run" driver.

Ambulances were dispatched to Espanola at once.

Mrs. Ickes left her summer cottage at Coolidge, N. M., yesterday afternoon with Mrs. Herrick, her house guest, to attend the Santa Fe fiesta opening tomorrow.

On Tour of Far West

Two other persons in the same car, police said, were in critical condition and were taken to Espanola.

Also injured was Ibrahim Seyfullah, attache of the Turkish embassy in Washington, and Frank Allen, Galup, N. M., taxi cab driver.

State police previously had identified the Turkish attache as John Herrick, husband of Mrs. Herrick, but a later check disclosed that Herrick was in Washington and preparing to leave for the west aboard a plane.

Mrs. Ickes was on a tour of the far west with friends, paying special attention to Indian culture and rituals in Arizona and New Mexico.

She was a politician in her own right.

Like the secretary a Progressive Republican, she was elected a representative to the Illinois assembly from a suburb in Chicago district.

She retired in 1934 only after she found her duties in Washington "would make it difficult for me to give that attention to the affairs of the district that it is entitled to at the hands of its representatives."

Mrs. Ickes was reported at Albuquerque to have left Coolidge, N. M., yesterday afternoon. It was understood she was going to Santa Fe with a Mrs. Herrick, a Washington newspaperwoman.

Indian service officials at Albuquerque said they had not heard of the progress of the womens' trip.

Menominee Man Is Hurt In Accident

Bay City, Mich., Aug. 31 (AP)—Two workers in a CCC camp were seriously injured tonight when they were struck by an automobile driven by Karl K. Leibrand, Bay City attorney.

The victims were Howard Dennis, 38, of Menominee, and Tom Devers, 40, of Detroit, both of whom were believed to have suffered fractured skulls. Authorities said they were informed the two men were arguing at the side of the road and walked into Leibrand's car.

12 Are Arrested, 8 Stills Seized

Grand Dapids, Mich., Aug. 31. (AP)—Seizure of eight stills and the arrest of 12 persons in 17 liquor raids in three western Michigan counties was reported today by George Rogers, chief inspector of the Michigan liquor control commission.

The raids were made in Muskegon, Lake and Mason counties. Rogers said those under arrest will be turned over to federal authorities for prosecution under the internal revenue laws.

QUARREL ENDS WITH SLAYING

Girl, 4, Killed by Boy, 9, In Argument Over Best Fruit

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—A children's quarrel had a tragic sequel tonight in the death of 4-year-old Elizabeth Vonderhosen, whose body, head crushed from repeated blows by a stone, was found in a marshy gully in the Classon's Point section of the Bronx.

Shortly after police stumbled on the body of the child, who had been hinted for hours by her frantic parents, they picked up a 9-year-old boy playmate of the girl and obtained the story of her death.

Assistant District Attorney William Smith said the boy confessed to beating Elizabeth over the head with a piece of rock in a fit of anger when she would not concede the merits of his argument that peaches are the best of all fruit. He then ran home, frightened.

The boy's identitity was learned when police questioned a girl playmate, who overheard the argument. The boy was remanded to the Children's Society while authorities considered what measures to take in the case.

Lily Pons Sings Jazz Music, Says It's Great Art

Hollywood, Aug. 31 (AP)—Lily Pons, concert star, sang a "hot number" today, embellished it with a variation of Bing Crosby's "boo-boo-boo"—and decided it was even greater art than grand opera.

She decided henceforth to include popular music in all her programs.

The diva's introduction to jazz came at the studio where her first movie, "Love Song," was being filmed. She sang "I Got Love," by Jerome Kern.

"Popular music certainly comes within my definition of art—perhaps, to a greater degree than grand opera," she said.

Lindbergh Mechanical Heart Fully Explained

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—The mechanical secrets of the robot glass heart which Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh built to maintain life outside the body were revealed officially today for the first time by a Rockefeller Institute publication.

The success of this heart, announced last June without explanation of its mechanism, was hailed by scientists as one of the great achievements in medicine.

The heart is a single piece of glass, roughly resembling an old-fashioned pump, in which an entire kidney, liver spleen, or other organs of the human body can be kept alive indefiniaely.

3 Glass Chambers

It is the first robot in which artificial life can be kept going as long as the medical scientsits wish, in plain view of their eyes, where they can study the otherwise hidden progress of disease.

The Lindbergh device — its proper scientific name a perfusion pump—supplies not only the heart beats of human pressure and rhythm, but artificial blood and air to maintain life.

Yet it is a device of marvelous simplicity. As diagrammed by Lindbergh himself it is three glass chambers, connected, one above the other, in vertical position.

In the top-floor chamber lives the organ endowed with artificial life.

The bottom floor chamber is filled with the artificial blood which medical scientists have long

RED TAPE CUT, WPA PROGRAM IS SPEEDED UP

JOBS AVAILABLE IN STATE FOR ALL IN 10 DAYS

Detroit, Aug. 31. (AP)—Slashing of governmental red tape will enable Michigan to make jobs available for all of the state's 140,000 employables on WPA projects within the next 10 days, Harry L. Pierson, works progress administrator for the state said today.

Pierson said that Dr. William Haber, his deputy, was informed at a regional WPA meeting in Chicago that detailed specifications will not be required by the government in accepting projects for approval. Removal of the rigid restrictions, Pierson declared, will enable him to rush applications to Washington.

Huge Road Program

In two more meetings, on Sept. 6 and 13, the allotment board expects to approve sufficient projects to remove all employables from the dole by Nov. 1 Haber was told.

It will be necessary for Michigan to have $133,500,000 in projects approved to provide jobs for the 140,000, Pierson said. To date applicotions have been submitted for work amounting to $45,000,000. He announced that the state is preparing a program of $50,000,000 in highway and conservation work, which will be ready this week, and has asked Detroit to submit several municipal projects.

He also said that outstate cities will be urged to immediately complete preparation of applications for at least $30,000,000 of work.

The 55,000 persons on FERA rolls on June 5 will get first call on the new jobs unless they have since obtained employment in private industry, Pierson said. Six thousand persons in Michigan were on WPA payrolls in Michigan last week and the administrator believes the number will be doubled this week when new jobs are started.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. M'CAULEY

Former Escanaba Resident Passes Away in Milwaukee

Mrs. Charles McCauley, of Milwaukee, wife of Captain McCauley, and mother of Mrs. M. B. Jensen of this city, member of a former Escanaba family, prominently known here, passed away at nine o'clock Saturday morning at her home.

Mrs. McCauley had been ill only a short time, a heart ailment, aggravated by a severe cold, weakening her condition, and word of her death yesterday came as a shock and a source of sincere grief to Escanaba friends and acquaintances of the family.

Captain and Mrs. McCauley and members of their family were residents of Escanaba for many years, moving about fifteen years ago to Milwaukee.

Survivors are Mrs. Jensen of this city, who left for Milwaukee early Saturday; Mrs. Frank Madden of Indianapolis, Ind.; Gertrude McCauley and Attorney William McCauley of Milwaukee; and Charles McCauley, Tampico, Mexico, and Bernice, of Chicago.

Funeral services, under the direction of the Becker funeral home, will be held Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at the St. Thomas church in Milwaukee.

Dowager Queen Of Belgium Will Take Astrid's Children

Brussels, Aug. 31 (AP)—A wartime queen, saddened by the death of her own husband, has taken Belgium's motherless royal children under her care.

Dowager Queen Elizabeth of Belgium assented quickly to the tearful request of her son, King Leopold, that she substitute for their mother, Queen Astrid, killed in an automobile accident in Switzerland.

It was only last year she lost her husband, King Albert, who fell to his death while mountain climbing. Since that time she has shunned public life.

Friends expected her new duties would bring the dowager qeen, who is highly beloved by her people, out of her semi-retirement into a more prominent life again.

Besides the queen-mother and her daughter, Princess Marie Jose of Piedmont, who accompanied her here from Naples, scores of titled personages were arriving for the funeral.

CONDITION IS SERIOUS

FDR PLANS FOR WESTERN TRIP

President Leaves White House for His Hyde Park Home

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—A stack of fresh new deal laws was left at the capital by President Roosevelt tonight as he turned homeward for a brief rest before travelling to the Pacific coast.

In a final busy day—ending one of the busiest months of the year—he signed the last three major measures enacted by congress that had not already received his formal approval. The day's highlight was his signature of the neutrality legislation with its temporary but mandatory arms embargo.

Mr. Roosevelt commented its purpose—"to avoid any acton which might involve us in war"—was "wholly excellent." But he projected a need for further legislative action lest the inflexible arms embargo "might drag us into war instead of keeping us out."

Guffey Bill Challenged

Other bills added to the law books by Mr. Roosevelt's signature included a $610,000,000 rivers and harbors bill and the amendments to the Tennessee valley authority act. Designed to bolster that law against court challenges, the TVA measure was signed in the presence of Senator Norris (R-Neb), father of the original law.

Before Mr. Roosevelt left the city, the constitutionality of a law signed only yesterday was challenged. Suit was filed in the district of Columbia supreme court questioning the validity of the Guffey coal stabilization bill.

It was announced he would speak over the radio Monday night, September 23, in opening the annual mobilization for human needs. Whether this talk will be made from the White House or Hyde Park was uncertain.

Immediately thereafter, it was believed the president will entrain for his long planned trip to the California-Pacific exposition at San Diego. This journey is attracting considerable attention from political leaders.

Shirley Temple And Gable Most Popular

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 31. (AP)—An "inside" studio survey of foreign lands indicated today that Clark Gable and Shirley Temple are the most popular international stars of the Hollywood screen industry.

Greta Garbo retains her prominence. Joan Crawford and Janet Gaynor still are favorites.

A similar survey last year showed the favorites to be Marlene Dietrich, Lilian Harvey, Miss Garbo and Maurice Chevalier.

United Confederate Veterans Convene

Amarillo, Tex., Aug. 31. (AP)—Men with hair as grey as ever were their uniforms will answer roll call here Tuesday at the 45th annual encampment of United Confederate Veterans—and it may be the last.

Age will permit only about 1,000 of the 7,000 survivors—"the last thin line of grey"—to make the long trip. Once more there will be a grand parade but none of the veterans will be permitted to march. Motor cars will convey them.

TREATY OF '06 VIOLATED, KING WILL BE TOLD

PROJECT VIEWED AS SEVERE BLOW TO MUSSOLINI

London, Aug. 31. (AP)—The British government moved swiftly tonight to halt the granting of concessions in Ethiopia to American and English interests.

Asserting the deal could not be negotiated without consultations among Italy, France and Britain under the tri-power treaty of 1906 the government announced its minister to Addis Ababa had been authorized to advise Emperor Haile Selassie to withhold the concessions.

The foreign office, in one of its rare official communiques, made the startling announcement disclosing the government was turning thmbs down on a deal concluded by one of its own citizens, Francis M. Rickett.

The government said it felt it necessary to inform the British minister that "such concessions would undoubtedly be a matter for preliminary consultations by his majesty's government, the French and Italian governments under article two of the tripartite treaty of 1906.'

The wireless station at Addis Ababa was closed for the night and it was impossible to learn what effect Britain's action would have upon Haile Selassie.

Observers, however, pointed out that since London is the chief hope of the "conquering lion of Judah" to prevent an expected Italian invasion, he is certain to listen closely to any suggestions from here.

BY JAMES A. MILLS
(World Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Addis Ababa, Aug. 31.—The swift stroke of Emperor Haile Selassie in turning over more than half his empire to Anglo-American oil interests for exploitation was generally regarded today as blocking Italian economic penetration of Ethiopia.

An official communique confirmed the concession, made as the emperor prepared for a feared Italian invasion.

Diplomatic quarters here appeared stunned.

(The British foreign office instructed its minister to Addis Ababa to inform Emperor Haile Selassie Britain advises him to withhold the concessions. The announcement said the concessions would necessitate consultations among signatories of the 1906 treaty dividing spheres of economic influence in Ethiopia—namely, Britain, France and Italy.

Chartered at Dover, Del.

(A government spokesman in Rome said the action could in no way deter Il Duce's East African plans.)

The agreement was seen in some quarters as a blow to Italian economic aims in the hinterland of Italian Somaliland and the only oil-bearing portion of interior Erithrea, also an Italian colonial possession.

The official communique said the concession was granted to the African Development Exploration company, incorporated in Delaware, for development of oil resources.

(This company was chartered at Dover, Del., July 1, 1935, with a capital stock of 5,000 shares at $100 a share par value. Alfred W. Britten, —Edward S. Williams and Vincent W. Westrup were the incorporators.)

The British promoter who negotiated the vast concession, Francis M. Rickett, said the exploration company is controlled by the Standard Oil company, but did not designate which one.

Registration of the company in the United States, and its backing by American capital, some sources believed, would prevent any intervention by the three powers. They pointed out the door is not closed to investors of other countries.

The great question to Ethiopians is what will Mussolini say and do. Most Ethiopians believed the emperor's surprise maneuver in opening the country to Americans provided a kind of insurance against war.

AUTO WORKERS END CONCLAVE

Dissension Evident on Opening Day Not Eliminated

Detroit, Aug. 31 (AP)—The new International Union of United Automobile Workers of America closed its organization convention today without wholly eliminating the dissension that flared up almost with the opening session last Monday.

A committee was named by the delegates, chiefly those terming themselves "Progressives", to carry a protest to the American Federation of Labor Council and convention in Atlantic City in October against the action of President William Green in appointing international officers and also against certain jurisdictional rulings, including that directing exclusion of machinists and other crafts from participation in the new union. The crafts are to remain in their own craft unions, already chartered by the A. F. of L.

Salaries Are Fixed

The new union is to begin functioning, from a financial standpoint, as of October 1, it was announced.

Final action today included the selection of South Bend as next year's convention city, adoption of a resolution endorsing the action of Secretary of State Hull in "condemning meddlesome Communistic activities in this country," and approval of international officers' salaries.

The convention fixed the salary of the president of the union at $6,500 annually; that of the vice-president and the secretary-treasurer at $4,500 each and authorized payment to executive board members at $10 a day while in session.

The officers, appointed by President Green, include Francis J. Dillon as president. Dillon, already under salary as an A. F. of L. organizer, however, will not receive the $6,500. The next president to be chosen when the new union is given full control over its own affairs, will be the first to receive it.

Other officers named are Homer Martin, of Kansas City, vice president, and Edward Hall, of Milwaukee, secretary-treasurer.

Youth Demonstrates A Simple Method For Trisecting An Angle

Detroit, Aug. 31 (AP) — Ted Macknik, 21-year-old Pennsylvanian, stirred the interest of Detroit mathematicians today with a demonstration of the method by which he contends he is able to trisect an angle, using only a straight edge and a compass.

The Mahanoy City youth, using a blackboard before an intent audience in a hotel ballroom, explained the geometrical formula which he says solves a problem mathematicians have always held geometrically insoluable. No measurements were indicated on either the compass or ruler used.

Macknik said his method applied to an angle of any size, and that by geometrical analysis of the angles made by the connecting points in his diagram any mathematician can prove that his method of trisecting a given angle is infallible.

Macknik is attending the Na- Ukranian Youth conference here.

Using O as a center, Macknik drew two straight lines to form an obtuse angle, labelling the extreme ends A and B. With O as the pivot point, he used his compass to draw an arc reaching the lines OA and OB and labelled the intersections S and T.

With A and B as centers, he made intersecting arcs to bisect angle AOB, cutting it into two equal angles along line OC. He then bisected angle OCB, labelling the new line OV.

Returning to the starting center, O, Macknik took a radius at random, and drew point L on the line OC and point N on the line OV. With the same radius, but using N as his center, he drew point M on the line OV. Using L and N as centers, he made intersecting arcs at a point P between the diverging lines OC and OV. Then with P and M as centers, he made intersecting arcs at point R.

A line was drawn from point O, cutting through the arc ST at Z and connecting through R to a point X. He bisected the arc SZ, using S and Z as centers, at point K, then drew a line through K and out to point Y. Arcs SK, KZ, and ZT were equal, he said, thus trisecting the original angle AOB.

(An authoritative source said the company would pay the Ethiopian government annually £25,000 (about $125,000) in gold coin or bullion, or its equivalent, and a royalty of one shilling, six pence per ton of oil produced for the first 25 years. Then the royalty would be increased.)

In the event of a state of emergency, of which the government shall be the sole judge, the company must attempt to fill all the government's petroleum and similar needs.

Sanity Of Woman Who Drowned Two Children Doubted

Appleton, Wis., Aug. 31. (AP)—Prosecution of a mother, Mrs. Leo Barthlmey, 33, who was alleged to have drowned her two children was held in abeyance today while psychiatrists investigated her sanity.

Samuel Sigman, district attorney, said further action awaited reports from the Winnebago state hospital for the insane as to Mrs. Barthlmey's mental condition. She will be under observation at the hospital for ten days.

Mrs. Barthlmey told a coroner's jury that she waded into the Fox river Thursday with her son, James, 4, and daughter, Carol, 14 months. Clutching the bodies, she stood in water neck-deep until the police found her three hours later.

"I just do everything wrong," she testified, explaining she believed her children were sub-normal mentally and physically.

Hamilton Buried; Mrs. Anna Steve Of Soo Pays Expenses

Oswego, Ill., Aug. 31. (AP)—Three men carted the body of John ("Three Fingered Jack") Hamilton to Oswego's little cemetery today, and gave unceremonious burial to the most wanton of the Dillinger killers.

Undertaker J. B. Thorsen and his assistant lowered the cheap, gray-cloth covered coffin into the ground while John Klein, pastor of the Oswego Presbyterian church read a brief service.

None of Hamilton's seven brothers and sisters appeared at the graveside.

The Hamilton remains were wound in a cheap winding sheet for unpleasant and obvious reasons: the body was dug up from a shallow grave in a gravel pit near here Wednesday, where federal agents said it had lain for sixteen months.

Mrs. Anna Steve of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., one of Hamilton's sisters, paid for his burial, Thorsen said.

Discovery of Hamilton's body by the federal agents disposed of the last of the principal members of the once-feared Dillinger mob.

she had been a leader of reform movements in Illinois for years.

Holding to her party affiliations, she served in her legislative post at Springfield during important sessions in 1933 after her husband was named secretary of the interior and subsequently federal administrator of public works by President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Ickes was the daughter of a pioneer family whose home stood on the site of the Congress Hotel at Chicago.

She was first married to Prof. James Westphal of the University of Chicago. They were divorced in 1909. Two years later she was married to Ickes.

She was an active collaborator with her husband when he helped to organize the progressive wing of the Republican party in Illinois. Her other interests were broad.

She was a former president of the board of trustees of the University of Illinois and president of the Chicago Women's Club.

known how to create, but which they previous lacked the means of using readily.

The second floor bulb, lying between the artificially living organ above and the blood chamber below, serves to regulate to human-like rhythm the flow of artificial blood.

This scientific life stream passes up a tube from the bottom chamber, through the second floor regulating chamber and up into the organ which pulsates with life as the stream passes through it.

After use there, the artificial life fluid passes down, by a system of check calves, to the lower floor chamber, to be used over again.

The flow up and down this three story device is automatic. It is caused by gas piped under pressure into the two lower floor chambers.

The pressure in the bottom floor chamber at times is greater than in the second floor, so that the life blood flows upward in beats. The pressures available range from zero to 120 millimeters of mercury, on the standard gauges for blood pressures.

There are no moving mechanical pressure. The gas pressure, which pumps the artificial life stream, is varied by a piston of oil. The oil moves to and fro in a glass tube to compress the gas in regular beats.

The power driving the oil piston is compressed air at the other end of the oil column. The air does not penetrate the oil.

Theatres

AT THE DELFT

W. C. Fields, star of "Man on the Flying Trapeze," at the Delft Theatre today is not only an ace comedian and master of pantomine, but his versatility extends to that of writing his own material for his inimitable type of characterizations in his screen portrayals.

He accepted his contract with Paramount on the condition that he be permitted to write his own stories, his own dialogue and act in his pictures as he saw fit. Fields made this stipulation not on the grounds of conceit, but because he realized that no one but himself could justify his particular kind of hilarious antics and funny, flowery dialogue.

His success in "Six of a Kind," "Old Fashioned Way," "It's a Gift" proved his contention that he knew what sort of roles were best fitted for him. In his latest fun picture "Man on the Flying Trapeze" he again demonstrates his ability to select parts and stories for his humor. He has adopted an entirely new set of gags and laugh routines in his new comedy where he is cast as a humble, blundering clerk whose one aim is to get away from his nagging wife and mother-in-law to attend a wrestling match.

At the Delft Labor Day and Tuesday

"Stranded," the Warner Bros. production starring Kay Francis will be the feature attraction at the Delft Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

It is another special service story, for which Warner Bros. are famous, and has as its background the United States Government's Department of Immigration.

George Brent has the leading masculine role and the cast includes Patricia Ellis, Donald Woods, Robert Barrat, Barton MacLane, Joseph Crehan, William Harrigan, John Wray, June Travis, Florence Fair and many others.

Kay Francis has the role of a Travelers Aid worker. She falls in love with George Brent, portraying a rough and tough engineer, who is building the biggest bridge in the world.

Brent is in love with the Travelers Aid worker, but believes a human being with a flaw should be thrown on the dump heap just as he would discard a girder for his bridge.

The engineer's eyes are finally opened when Kay saves not only himself from ruin at the hands of racketeers, but his beloved bridge.

Patricia Ellis plays a rich girl trying to break up the love affair between Miss Francis and Brent.

Donald Woods has the part of a social worker hopelessly in love with Miss Francis. Robert Barrat has the role of a best steel worker who periodically goes off on a bender, while Barton MacLane is the head of the building racketeers.

MRS. VARE WINS U. S. GOLF TITLE

Many Times Champ Beats 17 Year Old Minneapolis Girl

BY PAUL MICKELSON

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 31 (AP)—Glenna has done it again.

For the sixth time in 14 years of competition, Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare won the National Women's golf championship today, turning back the sensational Minneapolis freckle face, 17-year-old Patty Berg, 3 and 2, before a record gallery of 6,000 spectators.

She proved to golf that a champion can marry, raise two children and still come back to climb the loftiest heights.

Glenna swept through a great field that lacked only the defending titleholder, Virginia Van Wie of Chicago, to score a victory that was probably the sweetest of all for her.

Her triumph, gained against a sorrell top youngster who fought her with sub-par golf in a last desperate rally over the closing holes, added to one of the most amazing records in the game.

Since 1919, Mrs. Vare has so clearly dominated feminine competition in America that she has won the title six times, lost in the finals twice and been in the thick of the title rush almost every year except in 1933 when maternal duties forced her to pass up the big show.

Glenna Is Steady

Her victory today was achieved at the Interlachen Country club, Patty's home course and the same layout that Jones scored the third trick of his "grand slam" in 1930 by winning the National Open.

Cool, calculating and precise with her beautiful iron shots, Glenna was far too steady for her red-headed little rival today.

Usually out-driven by 10 to 20 yards, [illegible] repeatedly broke up Patty's brilliant rallies with iron that split [illegible] pin from all angles and distances. On the final two holes, after Patty had rallied to reduce her margin from four to two up by scoring [illegible] par and a birdie, Glenna shut her out by matching her birdie four on the 395-yard 33rd and then ending the duel by banging a five iron only six feet from the cup on the 34th to collect another birdie.

Over the distance, Glenna was only three over par. For the 109 holes she had to travel to beat the field, she was 13 shots over perfect figures on one of the game's most difficult courses.

Huey Long Defends Senate Filibuster, Slaps Roosevelt

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 31 (AP)—U. S. Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, in a radio speech tonight, described congress as a ventriloquist's dummy and ridiculed administration policies of President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Long defended his senate filibuster at the closing session of congress on the ground the administration's cotton policy and maneuvering in the house and senate were "outrageous and outlandish."

Wallace, the Louisiana Kingfish said, is "the ignoramous from Iowa," who "went through his St. Vitus' dance with Frankie playing the fiddle."

Long called Mr. Roosevelt and former President Hoover the "twin bedmates of disaster and ruin" and told his radio audience "if you want to help yourself, vote against Roosevelt."

RAIL PENSIONS NOT HINDERED

Huey Long's Filibuster Will Not Delay Program

By Paul May

Washington, D. C. August 31—Fears that Senator Huey Long's filibuster, which blocked passage of the deficiency appropriations bill, would prevent, or seriously delay, administration and operation of the new rail pension Act, are groundless ,according to the best information obtained in Washington today.

The reason is that while the deficiency bill carried an item of of $600,000 fo administration of the rail pension act, and loss of this fund will be felt, the backbone and teeth of the pension law are contained in two separate acts which have passed Congress and been signed by the President.

The pension act itself, stipulating its own effective date as March1, 1936, thus allows two months after the next session of Congress convenes, in which that body may provide funds for administration of the Act, it is pointed out.

Will Transfer Funds

Funds can be transferred from some other appropriation to provide enough personel to lay a groundwork, from which, during those two months, an adequate administration organization can be built up, it is believed in well-informed circles in Washington.

The rail Pension taxation oct, passed separately, and which will provide funds from which the pensions are to be paid, is by its terms operative from and after the date it is signed. It provides for collections of excise taxes equal to 3½ percent of total payrolls from all railroads, with salaries in excess of $300 per month excluded. This tax is to be collected quarterly, and the first collection will be made December 1st, covering the tax on payrolls for September, October and November. The income tax for rail employees, amounting to 3½ percent of their salaries, is also effective beginning September 1st. Thus there will be an ample fund available to pay such pensions as my be claimed when the pension bill itself goes into effect next March 1st, it is claimed.

Set Up Commission

The commission of nine, including three members each from the House and Senate, and three appointed by the President, which the bill directs, shall be set up to investigate the whole subject of railroad pensions, will not require much money for expenses, according to those in a position to know. The "investigation" will take the form mainly of a study and review of data already at hand or easily obtainable by questionnaire to the railroads, and only a very small clerical staff will be required.

Backers of the rail pension legislation are confident that early at the next session of Congress, the $600,000 which Huey Long blocked will be granted in a new appropriation bill, probably with additional funds added. This means that any money which it is necessary to "borrow" from some other appropriation now can be paid back within a few months, is wos pointed out. In view of this situation, no great difficulty in financing administration of the rail pension act is to be foreseen, it is claimed.

NAMED TO HEAD ARMY AIR CORPS

A short, stocky airman, with a high aviation rating, Gen. Oscar Westover, above, is the new chief of the army air corps. Assistant chief since 1931, Westover succeeds Maj.-Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, who stepped down after being cleared of charges involving army air contracts. Westover's four-year term ends in December.

St. Clair—The opening of the public schools here has been postponed from September 3 until September 9 to prevent a spread of infantile paralysis.

LABOR DAY

The growing interest in the organized labor movement is being shown in the staging of elaborate celebration programs in Escanaba and Gladstone on Monday. These two communities have for many years made special plans for the observance of the day that has been dedicated to the cause of labor.

Labor Day is a legal holiday. The American public likes the day. It is counted on, looked forward to. But it is not in genera meaning what its founders intended it should be. Labor Day is the last full day of freedom for pretty much everybody before buckling down to the activities and demands of fall.

Labor Day gradually atttained its full legal status. The first Labor Day was held in 1882 by the Knights of Labor. Two years afterwards the same organization held another similar parade and voted on that occasion the demonstration should continue to fall on the first Monday in September. It was not until 1887 that the day was made a legal holiday in one of the states. From that time on, state after state fell in line, until now, the country over, the first Monday in September is a day off.

The Knights of Labor who originated Labor Day were the forerunners, in quite a degree, of the present American Federation of Labor. After reaching the height of power, the Knights of Labor came to a split in 1866 and one branch became the American Federation of Labor. One of the marked differences between the two organizations is that the Knights of Labor believed in organization irrespective of trade while the American Federation was primarily made up of unions organized along trade lines. The development of the machine has had a tremendous effect on the crafts, with the result that the original industrial union idea is again gaining weight.

Monday is the workingman's big day. All should join in its observance.

THE ZONING LAW

Marquette county is taking the lead in the upper peninsula in the formation of a county planning commission to take advantage of the Luecke-Odell zoning act passed by the last legislature.

While much of the agitation for a state zoning law emanated from Delta county as a result of the efforts of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce and Wolverine Conservation association, there has been much interest in other parts of the peninsula. In Marquette county, for instance, the county road commission is largely behind the move since zoning is of vital importance to those who have charge of the construction and maintenance of highways.

In the past, families have settled in isolated sections of the county and then have demanded new roads, schools and other social services, the cost of which were greater than the contribution made to the public treasuries by those who were benefited. As a result, taxpayers in other sections were given additional tax burdens.

As was pointed out at the land zoning conference held in Escanaba recently, the next step to be taken is to have Governor Fitzgerald institute a state planning commission. At the same time, agitation must be started in the various counties for the appointment of county zoning bodies and the adoption by the people of zoning ordinances, which will prescribe the proper use of various areas. Future settlement in submarginal and isolated land areas will be prevented, and it is hoped that the mistakes of the past will be corrected by the government's new resettlement program.

In order to keep pace, Delta county should take action on the land zoning problem within the near future. This important matter should not be allowed to lag.

MAKING HEADWAY

Opening of bids of 5.8 miles of grading on US-41 between Nadeau and Powers is another step in the improvement of one of the most important arteries of traffic in the upper peninsula.

Highway US-41, between Menominee and Escanaba, serves as a gateway to the great Upper Peninsula recreational region, which this year attracted an unusually large number of tourists from the middle western states. A movement has been launched to designate US-41 as the Isle Royale National Park Trail since i stretches from Copper Harbor on the Keweenaw peninsula to the tip of Florida peninsula, serving three national parks and a number of historic battlefields and scenic regions enroute. All such efforts should help to promote tourist traffic into Hiawathaland.

From present indications, the gaps on US-41 between Menominee and Escanaba should be closed by the fall of next year. There is a considerable stretch between Rapid River and Marquette will need hard surfacing. Some paving needs to be done in the Copper Country in order to get the Isle Royale Trail in the condition tourists would like it.

It is encouraging to note, however, that real progress is being made in the program for getting the upper peninsula out of the mud and dust.

THE LEAGUE'S PROBLEM

The meeting of the League of Nations Council is now only six days distant. All indications point to an epoch-making session.

The duty of the Council is to prevent war in Ethiopia if it can. But it may decide that it can not. Its line of least resistance would beto debate for several days and then hand over the vital question to the League Assembly, which meets on the following Monday. The sentiments expressed in the Assembly could then determine what action the Council may take, for Assembly is almost sure to i ate the amountof support that would be given to a program of sanctions against Italy.

An anti-Italian verdict of either the Council or the Assembly is by no means certain. Italy may appear in both bodies with a powerful case against Ethiopia, proving her a dangerous neighbor to the Italian colonies that border her on either side, a breaker of the 1928 treaty under which Italy was granted certain commercial rights, and a violator of her engagements with the League, especially in the matter of slavery.

Italy may go so far as to declare that Ethiopia under Haile Selassie is on a par with the former possessions of Germany and Turkey that were adjudged unfit for self-government and were given by the League to other nations for "tutelage" and safe-keeping. The alternatives to the acceptance of such an argument by the Council are so terrible that any solution that will save the face of the League is likely to be welcomed.

That the stage is being set for some such play is seen in the decision of the French ministry to oppose the application of sanctions to Italy. That decision is a direct invitation to Il Duce, from Premier Laval, to present a case so strong as to allow France to say to Great Britain: "You see? We can not afford to pillory Italy, since she has so much right on her side."

And since Mussolini has already told Great Britain that no British rights or interests will be interfered with by Italy, the temptation will be strong to sit back and let Mussolini have his way—perhaps with reservations to the effect that any final settlement must be under League auspices.

There is probably not a country in Europe that gives a snap of the fingers whether Ethiopia is smashed by the Italians, provided its own interests are not endangered. But it lurks in the mind of every statesman outside Italy, and especially in the minds of the statesmen of the smaller countries, that if Italy is allowed a "punitive expedition" against Ethiopia and is not found guilty of violating both the League Covenant and the Pact of Paris, then there is nothing to prevent any well-armed power from taking offense at some trifling border incident, even in Europe, refusing to be satisfied with arbitration, and proceeding to clean up.

The greater nations may be able to find the proper "formula" at Geneva, but the little peoples will be afraid that the Covenant has been made meaningless.

Scandinatvian statesmen have already voiced the opinion that the League has become useless. The impression will deepen to certainty if Italy is given her own way in Ethiopia.

So, to keep war out of Europe, and permit it in Ethiopia, the League may be sacrificed, and the old system of alliance and a "balance of power" restored. That would suit Mussolini, who has never cared for the League. But it would not suit Great Britain, nor the smaller nations of Europe.—Detroit News.

CHAPTER XLVIII

Impulsively Jo put her hands against Todd Barston's cheeks, stood on tiptoe and kissed him. Then she hurried to her room to obey his orders. The aviator, his mouth half open, watched her go.

He turned suddenly to Peyton behind the desk. "Don't stand there grinning! Call the Crestmont airport!" Barston started for his own room, flinging further instructions over his shoulder. "We'll have to borrow the Inn's car."

Five minutes later, her heart singing, Jo Darien was in the car beside Todd Barston. They hurtled toward the airport at such reckless speed that conversation was almost impossible. But Jo did manage one question while she held with both hands to the door.

"D-do you think we'll find him?"

Eyes straight ahead, Barston hunched his shoulders. "If we catch him at the yacht club we're lucky. But if he's already sailed . . ." His ensuing silence was discouraging expressive.

Soon they were in sight of the air field. Barston's plane had been wheeled from the hangar. It was tiny, snub-nosed, almost like a child's toy. Jo remembered that this was Barston's special ship, designed by him to create a new speed record as an advertising stunt for a public utilities company. Although he did not need its speed for ordinary flying he had kept the plane for his private use.

As they walked across the field Barston said, "This job has plenty of what it takes to get there, Jo I'm going to give her whatever you can stand. If the speed gets too much for you just signal and I'll throttle down."

Jo nodded. "I hope I can take it, Todd."

In another moment she was in the cockpit, seated so low that her head was about even with the edge. Ahead she could glimpse the helmet of the taller Barston, and without a reassuring glance he began taxiing across the field. Suddenly the plane plunged into the air so swiftly that Jo's head shot back against the cushion. She had never dreamed of such breathless speed. It was almost as if the law of gravity had been reversed and the plane was diving instead of climbing. They had hardly cleared the tops of the trees when Barston leveled out, increasing his speed. Jo's heart was pounding fiercely, and despite the cowling she seemed to have difficulty breathing. Was she imagining this, or was she really going to be unable to stand the terrific speed of this snub-nosed ship? In sudden panic she wondered how she might signal Barston, as he had suggested. Certainly she couldn't make herself heard above the wind and the unbelievable roar of the motor. And, peering through her goggles about the cockpit, she saw no speaking tube or other device by which she could get his attention.

Then, raising her head, she saw Barston turning to see how she was getting along. He nodded his head questioningly and Jo, taking heart, smiled and nodded in return.

The snub-nosed plane plunged on. . . .

It seemed to Jo that they had been in the air not more than a couple of hours when Barston throttled down, began circling as if to land. For a moment she thought something must have gone wrong, but when she peered over the cockpit she was astonished to see the city spread out below her.

Barston's landing was swift and perfect. Jo hardly realized the plane had stopped before she saw him standing on the ground with his arms outstretched to help her down.

"I'll telephone the yacht club," he told her. "There may not be a moment to lose."

Still breathless, Jo ran after him into the long, low building. Nervously she smoked a cigaret while Barston disappeared into one of the booths to telephone. It seemed to her that he would never emerge—but when at last he faced her she knew before he spoke that they were too late.

"He—he's gone, Todd?"

Barston nodded quickly. "The yacht sailed last night."

Wordless, Jo sank on one of the benches. She pulled her helmet from her tousled golden head, and when she raised her eyes again Todd saw that they were wet. He spun suddenly on his heel and rushed to the dispatch desk of the airport station. In a few minutes he returned, smiling grimly.

"How badly do you want Doug Marsh?" he asked.

Jo met his slow gaze solemnly. "I—I'd as soon be dead as without him, Todd."

"Well, Jo, if that's how you feel, we'll try it."

"What do you mean?" she asked, rising from the bench.

"We're getting into an amphibian plane equipped with radio telephone. The weather's not so good off the coast, but—are you game?"

"You mean—you mean we're going to find the yacht?"

"I hope so, Jo," Todd said seriously. "But look here, this is no child's play, you know."

Jo nodded quietly. "Let's go . . ."

Not 10 minutes later they were over the city again, heading out toward the coast. Jo sat beside Barston in the cabin of the big plane, watched his intent, sure hands. He had said the weather was bad off the coast, but thus far they were flying against a blinding afternoon sun and the air was clear as crystal.

Soon they were over a sheet of glass which was the ocean. It reflected back the blinding sun, and in all that expanse Jo saw not one dot which might be a ship.

She leaned toward Barston's ear. "Do you have any idea at all what course to take?"

He nodded, spoke loudly over the roar of the motors. "I'm getting out as far as I think he could have gone since last night. Then we'll try the radio telephone." He pointed through the windshield of the cabin. "Fog coming."

In a moment they were in it, thick and heavy, a seemingly impenetrable mass. Jo grew afraid, and she hardly knew why. The sun went weak, then seemed to leave them altogether—leave them suspended in a huge gray cloud that had no beginning and no end.

After what to Jo seemed hours of flying, Barston clamped headphones to his helmet, began speaking into the transmitter. She read his lips rather than heard him saying, over and over again: "Barston . . . calling Yacht Juno." Over and over he gave his position and called Marsh's yacht. But nothing happened—nothing except the fog and drone of the motors—until Jo sank back against the seat in weary disappointment.

Suddenly Barston sat more erect, throttling down the ship and motioning excitedly to Jo. He called again, then listened, his face breaking into a happy grin. "Stand by," he yelled into the mouthpiece. "I'm landing, Juno. Stand by to receive valuable cargo!"

Jo felt the big plane circling cautiously, and within a few moments she was startled to see the lights of a ship in the fog.

"Send out your tender," Barston called again. Then, quite suddenly, the motors stopped, and Jo felt the pontoons strike the water hard. She had to hold tight to the seat to keep from being pitched against Barston with the roll of the sea.

"They're sending out a power tender," Barston said, peering through the fog-misted glass of the cabin. His voice was queer. It was tired and husky.

"Will you be able to get into the air again all right?" Jo asked.

He did not turn from the window. "Sure . . . sure, I'll make it. One nice thing about fog. It makes for a fair take-off in one of these things. If there was wind now—" He turned suddenly to Jo, took off his helmet and goggles. "Listen Jo—I've delivered you to Doug Barsh. But if ever you want to come back—"

Jo nodded quickly. "I . . . . I didn't think there were any men as fine as you are, Todd."

He grinned at her. "Sure. Too bad you aren't in love with me. But—that's not the way the thing works, I guess." He stopped, peered out the glass again. "The tender's coming alongside. Take off your shoes and stockings, Jo. That wing will be plenty slippery—and this has got to be quick or they might damage the plane. Ready?"

Jo nodded, holding to his arm while he opened the cabin door, almost lifted her to the wing. They heard someone in the tender shouting, "The owner sends his compliments, sir, and wants to know if there's anything you need."

"Not a thing," Barston said. "Just tell the owner to take darned good care of—of this passenger."

Douglas Marsh was peering over the side of the Juno when Jo came up the ladder. "Good Lord! Jo—Jo!" He took her in his arms, squeezing her so hard that her drenched jacket dripped water on the deck. "Jo, darling, I'd have been out there myself to get you—but I thought it was one of Barston's eleborate jokes."

"is it . . . a joke?" asked Jo slowly.

For answer, Marsh turned to the man at the rail. "Ben, find some dry clothes for Miss Darien. Tell the captain to keep the ship to her course. And tell him to be ready to perform a marriage ceremony—tonight!"

Through the fog came the roar of Barston's plane, the sound of pontoons struggling against the clutching waves. Then the drone grew steady and unfettered, sounded directly above them.

Marsh drew Jo into his arms again. "I thought I'd lost you, Jo . . . I was escaping to try to forget you."

"Well," Jo warned him happily, "don't you dare try to forget me from now on!"

UNUSUAL

Invited up some folks last week
    To see a sample of our climate,
Of which I often highly speak,
    In hours poetic even rime it.
They landed in a burning sun,
    The hottest known in many seasons,
And so my boasting days are done,
    For many reasons.

The sun went down, the clouds came up,
    The rain began to run in rivers,
And, when we sat us down to sup,
    The guests began to get the shivers.
Just what they thought that night of me,
    Who bragged about this place of places,
They did not say, but I could see
    It in their faces.

And then we had three days of fog
    (I'd bragged of sun, times without number),
The foghorn blew, that croaking frog,
    And no one got a wink of slumber.
It rained from seven until ten,
    And then it blazed from ten till seven.
I'll never boost a place again,
    Not even heaven.

The Necessity for "House Cleaning"
in Business

Sound banking and sound business agree that at least once a year every business should clean up its debt to its bank and start fresh.

This "house cleaning" is the best guarantee that business is using its bank loans for immediate requirements only; that it is not over-reaching beyond its capacity to pay.

Since a bank's first duty is to safeguard the funds of its depositors, the necessity for this customary practice is plain.

Wrecked Boat In Lake Michigan Is Puzzle To Sailors

Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 30. (AP)—Marine men were attempting today to identify a wrecked vessel that lies in 110 feet of water, 12 miles off St. Joseph in Lake Michigan.

No marine disasters had been reported in that vicinity for several years, yet portions of the submerged vessel's superstructure, brought to the surface, indicated that the wreck was not an old one. The hull apparently is about 100 feet long.

Nets from the gasoline fishing tug Roamer fouled the wreckage. When it became evident that no ordinary obstruction had been encountered, Capt Edward Tahaney, of St. Joseph, owner of the Roamer, ordered grappling hooks let down.

Fat Woman Tests Kansas City Seats

Kansas City, Aug. 30. (AP)—The 350-pound woman arose and sat down, moved on to another seat and repeated the process.

The test was on for the most comfortable seat with which to equip Kansas City's new $6,000,000 municipal auditorium. Then Mayor Bryce B. Smith, something of a lightweight, arrived and put all other testers to shame. Reposing at length in a heavily upholstered chair, submitted as a sample by one bidding company, the mayor fell sound asleep.

One of the strangest jobs in the world is that of Tom Smith, Norwich, Eng., who bathes canaries wrapping each customer in a tiny blanket and drying it before a candle.

CHAPTER I

Two young men leaving an eastern army camp in the fall of 1917, both in a great hurry, both carrying suitcases and wearing on their collars the shining new bars of second lieutenancy, bumped squarely into one another. Each muttered, "Pardon!" at the same time and hastened on his way. Each was going home first, for a brief visit with an adored wife and child. Each, during that visit, took on his knees his baby daughter and caressed her, and wondered if he would come back to the things he loved—home and wife and child.

Brian Chalmers, turning 2-year-old Elaine back to her sedate English nurse, pulled one of the child's sunny curls teasingly. "Goodby, Beautiful! You'll be asleep when I pull out in the morning. If I don't come back, don't take any wooden nickels or stepfathers!"

The child laughed with delight at the jolly, meaningless words her father was saying. She liked his pungent, tobaccoish, shaving-cream smell, and the feel of his lean, hard cheek against her own. She liked his big polished boots and the funny belt that went around his waist and up over one shoulder. "'By, Daddy!" she said, kissing him raputurously.

"She likes men," the child's mother drawled. She was a beautiful woman in a clinging sea-green negligee, with a face that was rather soft and petulant. "She's going to be man-hungry that girl. A little witch. I'm already jealous of her."

The man drew his wife to the arm of his chair and buried his face in the scented lace of her negligee. "You like men, too," he accused. "If I'm blown to atoms over there you'll select the best-looking mourning in town. You'll wear it becomingly for a year, and the day you step out of it you'll marry Higate Deal!"

"Darling!" she remonstrated. "Must you be spiteful about all the men who have nice safe jobs in Washington?"

"No," answered Brian Chalmers. "Only when they're your old suitors and still in love with you. Gwen, you'll take good care of Elaine, won't you?"

The woman's eyes opened in surprise. "What a thing to say to the child's own mother! Please remember, dear, that I love her, too. I put in hours and hours selecting her little frocks and toys."

"I know," the man nodded impatiently, "But I'm thinking of her character, Gwen, and things like that. I want her to grow up to be fine and straight and dependable." He paused uncertainly and lit a cigaret. "Lord! What DO I want for her?" He looked after the lovely child as she toddled up the broad stairway, holding tightly to her nurse's hand. "I suppose I just want her to have anything in this world that will make her happy. Yes." he repeated it, rather like a prayer, "—anything in the world that will make her happy."

The other young man was named George Woodson. He and his wife, Eleanor, were so beautifully and simply in love with each other that this short leave of his was like a bit of heaven in a sea of horror. Through every hour of its radiance sounded the relentless drum-beat of approaching separation, of submarine-infested seas, and a war to be fought.

They were restless in their love and foreboding. George said, "Let's walk along the river this evening. It's swell in October—"

"I'd thought of a picnic supper there," Eleanor replied. "At the little dove where we used to go when we were engaged. But there's Baby Ruth, dear. She has a croupy cough and we shouldn't leave her. Mrs. Gary would come in to look after her, but I'm just afraid—do you mind terribly? I've a party for us in the icebox. A cold chicken and all the things you love—"

George Woodson took his wife in his arms. "Mind, dear? It doesn't matter to me where I am, just so you are near enough to touch. Tell me, Eleanor! If I don't come back, will you promise—?"

Her dark eyes widened in pain and she quickly laid her hand over his mouth. "Don't say it!" she begged. "Don't think it!"

"I will!" he replied stubbornly. "It's got to be said. We've evaded it long enough. If I fail to come back, you're ready to go on gamely. That will be your duty, just as it's mine to go out and die, if necessary, to get this bloody war ended."

She replied in a muffled voice from his arms. "Your part is easier than mine, George. I'd rather go and fight than wait here. I'd rather die in battle than be left without my very heart."

"I know," he said soothingly. "I know." To himself he was thinking: "War is hellish. Just three years ago we found each other. It was in the fall, like this. I loved the way she walked along picking up red leaves, sticking them in her heart, in her dress. I loved the way she laughed and the way she sang, a little off key, like a happy child. I loved the way she closed her eyes when she kissed me. I still love these things in her. I'd like to go on loving them forever. Instead, I'm going off to a dizzy war that somebody else started, and maybe have my guts torn out with a cold steel bayonet—"

"George," Eleanor said, "you're shivering. Are you cold?"

"No," re replied. "You're imagining things. What I started out to say, dear, is this. If I shouldn't come back, you'll have Ruth to take care of. It's not as if we had parents and brothers and sisters to help you. There's nobody you'll have any real claim on. But there'll be my insurance. My war risk insurance, and $2000 more, of the regular kind. I'll show you the papers tonight—"

"There's no use in your urging me to live on," she said, "if you don't come back to me. I wouldn't. I couldn't. I would go to you, wherever you might me. Someone else would care for Ruth—"

He loved her the more, even for this weakness, this inconsistency. "All within five minutes," he pointed out, "you've refused to leave your baby for a picnic because she has croup, and you've refused to live for her if I die. That's logic for you."

They laughed together, rather shakily, and she pushed him down into his favorite chair and filled his pipe for him. He said, "Isn't that a new dress you're wearing?"

She answered, "Of course. If you hadn't noticed it, I was going to put poison in your tea. I'm making over the yellow flannel into a coat for Ruth. It's going to have cunning beaver collar and cuffs, made out of my neckpiece."

"More inconsistencies," he remarked, raising one eyebrow. "What'll you do for a neckpiece?"

Eleanor answered, "I'll wrap up in a muffler, I suppose. And I've done something else reckless, dear. I've bought six bronze chrysanthemums for the supper table, because we both love them so. And wait! That's not the worst. I've made two kinds of cake for tonight. The government may get me for that, but this is a celebration. I'll go make the coffee now, and you can read the paper—"

But he did not read the paper. He went into the bedroom and looked at her crib. He marveled at the smallness of the two hands that lay outside the covers, and at the softness of the round, flushed cheeks. The dark eyes, closed in sleep, were like her mother's. But he knew that the wide, engaging mouth and the squareness of the little chin were his own contribution. "Funny little mixture," he mused, looking down at her.

And then, strangely, he said something that the other young father had said of his child. "I want her to have whatever it takes to make her happy. Whatever it takes!"

Though they never encountered each other again, Brian Chalmers and George Woodson had two things in common: a rendezvous with death on a distant Flanders field, and the wish they had made for their children. It was the fault of Fate that these two children, in the distant year marked 1935, should find themselves in the same place, wanting the same thing . . . Which of you wished harder, oh gallant young fathers?

CHAPTER II

Ruth Woodson stooped to pick up a red maple leaf from the ground and realized that fall had come.

"Fall and no job yet!" Well, what could she expect when she'd not had a business course, or any special training? She'd heard countless stories of girls like herself walking their shoes thin, and not getting anywhere. "And it's no idle tale, my girl," she murmured to herself as she stepped on a pebble and felt its sharp prod against the sole of her foot. "These shoes have got to be half-soled soon, or I'll have stone bruises."

The shoes were trim enough to look at, however, and covered a shapely, well-arched food. Nor were her feet the only points of interest which the girl possessed. She had a slender, nicely poised body and a face that made a passer-by want to stop and look again. Not because of any startling beauty, but because of an inner radiance and a piquancy of expression that she wore. The eyes were dark and nicely lashed. The hair was dark and waving. The nose was short and straight, the chin square, and between the two was a mouth that was too wide, like a small boy's, but alluringly shaped. Today a brave dash of lipstick caused the mouth to match exactly in the color the gay, blood-red leaf which she had just fastened in the lapel of her suit.

Ruth saat down on a park bench and opened the newspaper she had bought on the corner. She turned to the column that said "Help Wanted, Female." She saw there was nothing new there—nothing she had not already followed up or eliminated as out of her range. With a sharp little sigh she laid the paper down and let her thoughts run riot . . . "I can't afford lunch today. Thirty cents saved is 30 cents made . . . I must go to one of the 10-cent stores and buy narcissus bulbs for Cousin Bessie's birthday . . ."

Cousin Bessie, of the impending birthday, was the widowed relative with whom Ruth lived in a small, artistic and very crowded flat in Brooklyn. Mrs. Lawrence read manuscripts for a tottering publishing house in New York and was very poorly paid indeed. With this inadequate salary she supported herself, an 18-year-old daughter and a 16-year-old son.

Ruth Woodson's face made the passerby want to stop and look again . . . not because of any startling beauty but because of an inner radiance and piquancy of exprêssion.

For some months now she had been supporting Ruth Woodson as well, at least as far as food and shelter were concerned. It was this thought that made Ruth a little desperate when she had time to think about it, as she was doing now.

Ruth had been "passed around" since her fourth birthday. George Woodson, her father had gone to his brave death just before the Armistice. Eleanor Woodson had eventually followed him, as she had told him she would do. It took long months of grieving assisted by nervous exhaustion and pneumonia to turn the trick, but in the end she had died with a triumphant smile on her face and a feeling of release in her heart. She was off to find her lover.

The child, Ruth, and George's insurance went to Greataunt Sarah Woodson, who accepted them as a sacred trust and a terrible burden. Great-aunt Sarah lived several years to do her duty by Ruth before dying and passing her on to another great-aunt whom Ruth affectionately recalled as "Aunt Matilda." At Aunt Matilda's death the child's real troubles began. She was 10 years old and, as she naively expressed it at the time, she had "run out of aunts." She had also run out of money, for the two old ladies between them had invested the little competence unsoundly.

Ruth was then passed about among several cousins of her parents' with more speed than tact. A child of less character might have been broken in spirit and have become a self-pitying, shrinking little introvert. Or she might have developed into a pushing, obnoxious little aggressive, snatching advantage where she might. But Ruth Woodson did neither. As her body grew straight and true, so did her naturally sunny disposition. The knowledge that she was a moneyless orphan whom no one needed did not embitter her. It only made her a little more watchful and well-mannered than most children. She learned to squeeze into corners, as it were, and to make herself useful when she could.

When Ruth finished high school in the little upstate town where she had grown up, there was no job available for her, so she came to New York to the one relative who remained untried—Cousin Bessie Lawrence. The cousins in Worthville waved her off with finality and ill-concealed relief, for they had broods of their own and they regarded Ruth as "a problem." The girl had an excess of high spirits and a taste for adventure which upset and annoyed them.

Cousin Bessie, to whom Ruth had come so eagerly that day two summers ago, was kindness itself. Unfortunately, she was also inefficient and impractical. She had spoiled her own two children beyond reason, and she dashed from home to office every day, and back again, like a rabbit persued by hounds—the hounds of work and debt and possible failure.

Bessie Lawrence managed to give Ruth the wrong advice at every turn. Instead of arranging for the girl to borrow money for a short and thorough business course or for some vocational training, she allowed her to take temporary jobs for which she was unsuited and which soon "petered out," leaving Ruth discouraged and dismayed. For weeks now she had had nothing at all to do. The dwindling change in her pocketbook was there because she had been able to reline a coat for a woman in the apartment above them.

Ruth got up from the bench to go and noticed that a figure was standing in front of her. It was an exceedingly well-dressed man, not old, not young. He was looking at her, and as she looked at him he took off his hat courteously.

He said, "I'm on my way to a late lunch at the Casino. I wonder if you will join me?"

The casualness of the attack impressed Ruth more than any maneuvering on his part would have done. She looked at him with interest and found him to be rather handsome and impressive. He might even be a gentleman. She thought, "I'm hungry. Why not? Besides, it's an adventure. Imagine being asked to the Casino, just like that!" She'd never been inside the doors, of course.

The man said, "Girls who look like Claudette Colbert expect to be admired by strangers, naturally."

Ruth again felt a prick of admiration for his cleverness. She knew there was a haunting resemblance to Colbert's face in her own. This observing man might be entertaining. Certainly he was flattering. And then, struggling up from some deeper consciousness of her mind, there came this warning, like a little bell in some far away temple garden:

"Wrong things begin this way. Careful, Ruth! You're about to be picked up! Once done, it gets easier and easier!"

She looked at the man for a moment, coolly. Then she said to him, "I hope you'll enjoy your lunch. Don't let me detain you."

He smiled guardedly. "I'm sorry," he replied. "Now and then one tries the wrong girl. No offense, I hope?"

"None at all," Ruth told him. "And thank you for saying I look like Claudette." She smiled as she turned and left him, but it was a clear-cut smile of dismissal.

In the 5-and-10 she bought a chocolate bar when she selected Cousin Bessie's narcissus bulbs. The bar was her lunch, and she came out of the store nibbling it. It tasted heavenly. She had sold no part of herself to obtain it, not even her pride.

CHAPTER III

When Ruth reached home she found her cousins, the Lawrence young people, engaged in one of their major battles. Letty was trying to wrest from her brother a dollar bill which he had found on their mother's desk. Being large and well-developed for her 18 years, the girl was more than a match for the slim 16-year-old youth who was holding out against her.

"Help, Ruth!" Cecil yelled, biting at his sister's eposed arm. They were struggling on an antique Jennie Lind daybed and it gave signs of falling apart at any moment.

Ruth looked at them helplessly. "I don't know who's right," she yelled back above the tumult.

"Well, you know who's getting beaten!" Cecil retorted between gasps.

Letty said, 'if she comes near, I'll slap both your faces, and I mean it. Give me the dollar, pig! You got the last one we found. You know how I need stockings!" With a final twist she pried open her brother's hand, snatched the damp, crumpled bill and fled with it to her bedroom.

Cecil lay groaning and rubbing his chest, where his sister's knee had pressed. Ruth said, "If you wouldn't smoke so many cigarets, Cecil, you might beat her now and then." She had no admiration and very little liking for this high school junior who took his mother's hard-earned money as his just due and pampered himself extravagantly.

Letty came back into the room with her hair smoothed and her face carefully made up. She had a round, pretty face with wide, sky-blue eyes, fringed with dark lashes, and light brown hair. She looked much like a Christmas doll. In fact, she had once played that role in a school play, standing against the wall in a huge box, clothed in a crisp, knee-length dress, and holding out her arms invitingly while she smiled a blank, dimpled smile. Ruth knew, however, that Letty was not as blank and forceless as she appeared.

Once when Cousin Bessie, Letty's mother, was bemoaning the fact that the girl could not go to college, Ruth had said to her, "I don't think Letty would like college, Cousin Bessie. She's not a bookworm like you at all. I think Letty ought to marry young.' It was true. She was a voluptuous rosebud that had formed early and needed to blossom early. Marriage would be the perfect blossoming.

Letty sat down and crossed her pretty legs. "Any luck in town today, Ruth?"

Ruth answered, "No, Letty," and wished that she might never hear that question again. "Can I help you with dinner?"

"It's almost ready," Letty replied, brightening. She genuinely loved to plan and cook a meal. "On account of its being Mother's birthday I've cooked a chicken. There's rice to go with it, and head lettuce salad and home-made rolls. I've made a cake, too. Cecil—!" she exclaimed, turning to her lolling brother, "go clean yourself up before Mother gets home."

Cecil sat up, yawning. 'All right. If the doorbell rings while I'm washing," he said, "it'll be Jack Willer. Let him in. He wants some radio books I've got."

"I'll let him in, of course," Letty said. She was looking intently at her finger nails. She got up and went into the kitchen and put on a ruffled organdie apron.

Ruth followed her. "What can I do, Letty?" she asked earnestly, wanting to help. "Or had you rather I stayed out of your way now and washed the dishes afterward?"

"Yes," answered Betty, "that would be better." She got out four salad plates and then thoughtfully went and got another. "I'll ask Jack to stay," she said. "He's fun." She turned her back and began to hum.

Ruth went to the coat closet and hung up her hat and coat. She thought, "Letty doesn't want me around. She dislikes me more all the time." It was a problem that Ruth had tried a thousand times to solve. She was dependent on the Lawrences until she could establish herself. She knew that she crowded them. Even before she came it must have been hard for the three of them to move about the five small rooms, filled as they were with Bessie Lawrence's antique furniture and brass candlesticks and samovars and India prints. Mrs. Lawrence had collected these things in her happy young married days and she would no more have parted with them than with one of her children.

After Ruth's arrival they let her sleep on the daybed in the living room, and keep her clothes in one side of the coat closet. Ruth was deeply grateful and felt herself fortunate. (An orphan who has lived in the crowded homes of distant relatives does not grow up expecting a great deal of life). She only wished that Letty did not feel this antipathy toward her. "Not that I blame her," Ruth thought reasonably. "Here I am, taking up room, consuming part of the family income and contributing nothing but a little work."

The doorbell rang and Ruth went, absent-mindedly, to answer it. The house was a duplex and the Lawrences lived on the first floor. When Ruth opened the door she saw a young man standing on the porch. It was Jack Willer.

"Hello!" she said politely. "Come in, Jack. Ceicl's expecting you." She showed him where to put his hat and took him into the living room. She sat down on the little Victorian settee and began to make polite conversation, while he strode around the room, picking up things and laying them down in the restless way common to young men. He was 22 or 23 years old and was handsome in a curly-haired, movie hero way. Ruth had always found him rather boring. She once said to Letty, "If you'd remove the slang from Jack's conversation, all you'd have left would be a stack of prepositions and a 'cuss word' or two.' Letty had disagreed. "I think he's awfully clever and interesting," she had said.

Ruth noticed that Jack Willer was looking at her queerly. He said, in an accusing voice, "I've been talking to you for five minutes and you haven't even been listening."

Ruth replied in confusion, "The idea, Jack! I always listen to you. I simply hang on your words!" In her remorse for his injured feelings she made her voice more warm and cordial than she intended.

In an instant he was on the little sofa beside her, his arm around her shoulders and his sparkling eyes loking into her surprised ones. "Why have you always avoided me, Ruth?" he asked. "Why aren't you always nice to me like this?"

Ruth jumped to her feet, not knowing what to do or say. She felt positively relieved to see Letty standing in the door. That is until Letty said coldly, "Am I interrupting something?"

"No," replied Ruth in embarrassment. "Oh, no. I'll go and call Cecil." As she passed Letty their eyes met and the hatred in those sky-blue eyes gave Ruth the answer to the question she had been asking herself for weeks. Letty was in love with Jack Willer and regarded Ruth as her rival.

Ruth wished bitterly that there were some spot in the house where she might go and be alone, some little sanctuary where she might go now with her problems and her mistakes, and try to think them out. Well, there was the street—

She went to the coat closet and got her hat and coat and put them on. She slipped out of the kitchen door.

Ruth did not know how far she had walked, or how long. She found herself on the fringe of a busy business section. She saw a great bus chugging before a station. Across its sides, in neat painted letters, were the words, "CLEVELAND, BUFFALO, ROCHESTER, SYRACUSE, SCRANTON—" The lights were lighted and a few people were filing in, but the driver was not in sight.

"It won't be going for a while," Ruth said aloud to no one in particular.

Next door there was a pawn shop. She saw that, too. There were three gilded balls hanging above the door. She went through that door.

The man who came to serve her was elderly. He wore a skull cap and had a white beard and infinitely kind eyes. He reminded her of Moses. She said to him, "I have a little pin here that I would like to sell. It belonged to my mother, and to my grandmother before that. I think it even belonged to my grandmother's mother." She unpinned it from her collar and showed it to him. "What will you give me for it?" she asked.

The old man took the pin in his slender, sensitive hands. He said, "You must need money badly to part with this thing of your people." His voice held a sort of reproof, the reproof of a proud race that respects a heritage.

"I do need money badly," Ruth answered. "I need to catch the bus out there that's about to leave."

The old man raised his eyes from the pin and looked at her. Then he said, "I am a sentimental man. I do not need any more money than I have. I can do what I like to do.' He seemed to be explaining these things to himself, rather than to the waiting girl. "I will give you $20 for the little pin, and I will put it away until you come again to get it. It pleases me to do this."

"You are good," Ruth said, as he counted out the bills. "I think God sent me here"

The old man shook his head in negation. "We can never be sure of those things," he said.

MANY PICKED BLUEBERRIES

Harvesting of Peninsula "Blue Gold" Now Big Industry

The alchemy of weather having transformed the plains of northern Michigan into fields of "blue gold" tens of thousands of residents of the state, young and old, have moved into the open for the cash-crop blueberry harvest, which to many means food and clothing for the winter months.

Weather conditions have been so favorable this year that a bumper blueberry crop of exceptionally high quality was predicted, especially for the upper peninsula. Tent villages have appeared in many localities where the berries are plentiful and in a number of instances these temporary towns have populations of several hundred persons.

Concentration Camps

Because of the heavy concentrations, the Department of Conservation has stepped in this year to relieve conditions.

Two concentration camps were planned by the Department, one on the Fox river road northwest of Seney and another north of Newberry. So that fire hazards would be reduced, firelines were to be plowed around the camps and each camp was to be provided with well water and sanitary facilities as an accommodation to the berry pickers.

The annual hegira of the blueberry-pickers into the plains and marshes of northern Michigan usually brings about an increased fire hazard and fire wardens and towermen become doubly apprehensive and more vigilant.

The blueberry harvest this year has drawn not only thousands of Michigan residents from the towns and cities, but many out-of-state persons. A survey of the blueberry marsh north of Gilchrist, western Mackinac county, recently revealed an army of 800 berry pickers and automobiles from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Colorado.

Important Industry

Blueberry time each year in northern Michigan brings a revival of an important industry, a cash-crop for hundreds of families. The season ordinarily extends from mid-July until the killing frosts, in the upper peninsula, and trucks of the "blue gold" leave Newberry and other points stacked so high they barely clear the light wires in the streets.

Blueberries this year are reported in special abundance from the Fox river country between Seney and Grand Marais east through the Lake Superior State forest to the Sheldrake plains and south to Millecoquins plains near the Mackinac-Luce county border.

Whole families move into the plains during the berry season, setting up tents, brush shelters and shacks of different descriptions and each member of the family goes to work.

The berries are sold mainly to truckers who purchase the fruit and transport it to the larger cities, some of the best markets being located at Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Detroit and Grand Rapids. Shipping points in the upper peninsula such as Raco, Seney, Hulbert, Eckerman and Newberry, have been reported especially busy this season with the current crop.

STATE EMPLOYS A. S. HAZZARD

Appointed Director of Michigan Fisheries Institute

Dr. A. S. Hazzard, formerly associate professor of aquatic biology for the United States Bureau of Fisheries at Salt Lake City, Utah, has been appointed director of Michigan's Institute for Fisheries Research.

Dr. Hazzard will succeed Dr. Carl L. Hubbs of the University of Michigan. For some time past the press of Dr. Hubbs' work at the University has been making it increasingly difficult for him to carry the work and responsibility or directing the Institute program. Dr. Hubbs has become widely known throughout Michigan, in part through his connection with the Institute, directing inland lake surveys and lake and stream improvement projects in many parts of the state.

The Institute is financed by the Department of Conservation to handle investigations and research on fisheries problems of a scientific nature. It will continue to have its office at the University museums where office and laboratory facilities are provided by the University of Michigan.

More than 2,300 ringnecked pheasants, reared at the state game farm near Mason, have been released by the Department of Conservation in 23 lower Michigan counties, so far this summer.

The bluefin of Lake Superior, the blackfin in Lake Michigan and the bloater in Lake Ontario are now practically extinct as commercial fish.

Bass Fishing Demands Skill

BY DR. R. R. SERMON
Athletic Director, North Carolina State

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 31.—There is good bass fishing in North Carolina, but it takes good quarterbacking to bring home the fish.

Bass are the gamest fish in North Carolina. Large-mouth can be taken at any time except from April 1 to May 10. Small-mouth of mountain streams are protected from Sept. 1 to June 10. The closed season in September is imposed to protect mountain trout, which spawn at that time.

I personally believe that more skill is required to get a strike in bass fishing than to land the fish. It is important to know where and how to place the plug, and how to reel in. Such skill comes only with practice.

The type of plug has a lot to do with bass fishing in Carolina waters. A football quarterback will try one play, and if that doesn't work iwll try another. That's the way with bass fishing—if the first plug doesn't bring results, another may.

Once a North Carolina bass has been hooked, that maneuvering is required to bring him to the boat. They have many tricks plays—and runs and off-tackle thrusts—which they use to gain liberty.

It's a matter of wearing the fish down and it may as long as 10 minutes. At the same time the bass must be kept from wrapping the line around some tree stump or root.

Some people use nets and other devices to take a fish out of water after working him to the boat. It is much more sporting to land the fish without a net. Should the fish get away, that's only a part of the game.

Generally speaking, there is no such thing as fisherman's luck when it comes to bass. I have watched experienced and inexperienced fishermen in the same boat, and have seen the veteran pull fish out of holes where only a second before the tenderfoot had been unable to get a rise.

The difference was in the way the old-timer laid his plug up near the bank, the art with which he placed it there, and the science with which he played it as he reeled it toward the boat.

Nine CCC Camps Working On Parks

Michigan now has nine camps of Civilian Conservation Corps men working on state park projects.

Two new camps recently have been established, one in the Waterloo sub-marginal land reclamation project between Jackson and Ann Arbor and another in Gogebic county.

The Waterloo camp is located on Portage lake and has been occupied by a personnel of 165 ex-service men. The Gogebic camp is being sponsored by the Gogebic county Board of Supervisors and is located near Ironwood. The personnel, now numbering more than 150, will work on county and probably state park projects.

Other CCC camps working on projects sponsored by the Parks Division of the Department of Conservation are located as follows: Bay City state Park, Hartwick Pines state park, Ludington state park, Wilderness state park, J. W. Wells state park, Mackinac Island state park and Dodge Bros. state park No. 4.

U. S. FORESTS ARE ENLARGED

Acquisition of 171,000 Acres Approved by Commission

The National Forests of Michigan will be increased by 171,000 acres, the purchase of which was approved by the National Forest Reservation Commission at its meeting in Washington, August 23, according to telegraphic information received by E. W. Tinker, Regional Forester. 236 former owners optioned land to the Government.

This does not mean the formation of new Forests, Mr. Tinker explained, but Government ownership of more of the land within existing National Forests and authorized Purchase Units.

In terms of dollars, this is part of the largest land program we have submitted to the Commission, Mr. Tinker added. In order to get all cases in shape for approval, it has been necessary for trained workers to organize into day and night shifts

Only "Ghost Towns"

While generally the price per acre is considered very low, one needs to reflect that 100 years ago, Uncle Sam all but gave away these priceless timbered sections, or sold them at prices ranging from 25c to $1.25 per acre. Then it was covered with the famed pines and hardwood. Now they call it Stumpville, and the once buzzing towns of the "Come and Get It" days are mere "Ghost Towns." The Government is taking it back in its exhausted condition, and through the great massed man power of the CCC, will be able to immediately begin the task of regeneration. These millions of tax loaded lands that have been a dead weight upon the good lands, will immediately be transformed into revenue producing assets, and be made to take their part in supporting the population. One-third of forest incomes comes back for the support of schools and the building of roads and trails.

Buys Submarginal Lands

The Forest Service is not interested in farmlands that will maintain a good standard of living. It is buying the submarginal lands that naturally grow timber crops, but that are soon exhausted when put to cultivation. Forest soils renew themselves for all time.

Formerly the Government concerned itself mainly with the protection of the great public domain of the West. Michigan has profited immensely by the more recent program for the restoration of Forest soils East of the Mississippi, first, from the standpoint of watershed protection, and later recreationists have taken a vigorous lead in developing forested areas. Many feel that recreation demands are now more pressing than the need even for timber. However, modern forestry correlates these uses, to the advantage of each.

USING TRUCKS TO CURB FIRES

New Equipment Acquired by Conservation Department

Even Paul Bunyan, that legendary giant of the northwoods, would have been envious of Michigan's newest piece of fire-fighting equipment.

When the famous Paul wished to build a fireline or trail, he merely dragged his peavie through the woods, but the new four-wheel drive truck at Michigan's Forest Fire Experiment station does a far more finished and effective job.

The capacity of the new truck is regarded as prodigious in comparison to the standard equipment, since it can do the work of five or six ordinary tractor disc units in a single day. It can maintain 30 miles of fireline or truck trail in approximately 24 hours and perform a finished job in a single operation. The truck has an underslung disc and four rubber tires.

In testing the unit, the Experiment station again proved its worth. It afforded the skilled and experienced men and facilities necessary to give the unit a thorough trial so that its qualities could be adequately tested before purchase. The unit was bought by the Department of Conservation with a view to the enormous amount of maintenance work that will become necessary when truck trails and fire lines built and maintained by CCC labor will come under the administration of the Department.

Approximately 6,800 fishermen, who are United States citizens, harvest in the neighborhood of 100 million pounds of fish from Great Lakes waters each year, says the United States Bureau of Fisheries. For this crop they receive about $6,000,000.

National Rifle and Pistol Matches to Draw 3,000 Shooters to Camp Perry

BY JIMMY DONAHUE
NEA Service Sports Writer

Camp Perry, O., Aug. 31.—On Sept. 1 about 3000 rifle shooting enthusiasts will converge here on a little National Guard camp overlooking the scene of Admiral Perry's great naval battle on Lake Erie. They will gather to engage in one of the largest and most unusual of all sporting events, the National Rifle and Pistol Matches.

For three weeks, the countryside near here will whine with the noises of .22-caliber bullets, the loud bark of automatic pistols, and the snappier crack of .30-caliber rifles as a two and ahalf mile line of shooters concentrates on bull's-eyes.

The matches will end in a grand flourish with nearly 150 ten-man teams competing for the team championship.

The first week of the matches will be devoted to a small arms firing school, in which self-taught shooters will be shown the finer points which have been developed by leading marksmen of various branches of the service.

The following two weeks, more than 60 separate events will be staged with different types of arms, ranging from the popular small-bore rifle to the anti-aircraft machine gun. The climax comes during the last four days with competition for the national match trophies donated by the War Department.

Altogether there are more than 50 trophies, with a total value of $50,000. Among them are the WimbledonCup, placed in competition by Queen Victoria in 1875, and the Leech Cup, originated in 1874, when a group of American shooters defeated an Irish team led by Capt. Arthur Blennerhassett Leech.

More than 1200 soldiers have been detailed for duty as scores and markers for the 3000 actual competitors.

The matches were made possible by a special appropriation of $350,000 by Congress. Part of the money will be used to finance expenses of two teams from each state in the Union—a National Guardsman squad, and a civilian team.

Each team will be made up of 10 shooters, two alternates, a team captain, and a coach.

Tahquamenon Region Now Being Surveyed

Following a resolution adopted by the State Conservation Commission at its August meeting at Newberry, P. J. Hoffmaster, director of conservation, announced today that a survey has been inaugurated in the vicinity of Tahquamenon Falls to determine the area necessary to be included within a proposed state park.

Hoffmaster was requested by the Commission to determine the acreage in the vicinity of the falls that will be necessary for park purposes and to investigate the possible costs. His report will be presented to the Commission within the next month.

Following commission action in 1927 when it was voted to accept the Falls as a state park when and if the property is acquired, Hoffmaster said that plans were made at that time for development of the area.

Although there has been agitation for several years to create a state park around Michigan's largest waterfalls, intensive interest has developed in the upper peninsula only within the past month. Resolutions favoring a Falls park have been passed by a large number of northern Michigan organizations.

The Falls of the Tahquamenon in Luce and Chippewa counties today are practically inaccessible except by boat. The Big Falls have a drop of approximately 50 feet. There are four miles of rapids below these falls, terminating in the Little Falls of the Tahquamenon which also are desired within the proposed park area. The Big Falls of the Tahquamenon are claimed to be the largest waterfalls east of the Mississippi river with the exception of Niagara Falls.

Eleven Fawns Born to Doe In Five Years

Eleven fawns in five years! That's the record of a doe deer in the tourist park at Newberry.

The achievement of this doe is beginning to attract the attention of wildlife students of the state. It became a resident of the park little more than five years ago and when two years old produced its first fawns, a set of twins, in 1931.

This was regarded as extraordinary for a two-year-old doe. One of the twins was a male and the other a female.

Since 1931 the Newberry doe has had 11 healthy fawns, eight of them males and three of them females. It has given birth to twin fawns every year, except 1933 when triplet fawns were produced, all males. In 1932 the doe brought forth male and female fawns; two male fawns in 1934 and now is rearing the fourth set of twin fawns, a male and female.

A wild doe with triplet fawns was reported seen by Archie Beauchamp, conservation officer of Iron River, who was patrolling at the time in the vicinity of Minnie lake in Iron county.

DO YOU KNOW

1. That only land inside the boundaries of a national forest can be bought by the Forest Service. That all back taxes must be paid, but if owner is unable to pay the back taxes arrangement can be made to have the back taxes reduced from the purchase price.

2. That before the owner is paid for the land, the title has to be examined and abstracts prepared and the land deeded to the United States. This usually takes from six months to a year.

3. That all land options must be presented to the Federal Reserve Commission for approval.

4. That the total acres planted to date in the Upper Michigan National Forest which is composed of the Hiawatha and Marquette Units added up to 20,725 acres. And that the planting program of 1935 totals 13,016 acres.

5. That forest plantations must be protected from fire, cattle, rodents and insects and disease of all descriptions.

6. That snow shoe rabbits are one of the worst enemies of young plantations. Until the trees have grown beyond their reach they are never safe. The Forest Service is controlling rabbit concentration by supervised hunting and trapping on badly infested areas.

GARY SPORTSMEN LIKE FISHING IN U. P.

Fishing experiences enjoyed by Gary, Ind., sportsmen in the vicinity of Escanaba are told in the "Sportsmen's Scrapbook" column of the Gary Post-Tribune.

The column reads as follows:

How'd you like to tie into a rip-r'arin', 20-inch smallmouth black bass after a 50 weeks' layoff from fishing?

The place to go for that kind of a thrill, avers Claude Moore, the Gary Land company's chief of police, is the Sturgeon river, located on the Michigan Upper Peninsula not far west of Escanaba (Claude's home town).

"I fished the Sturgeon in company with John Judson, a guide working out of Escanaba who has garnered no mean amount of fame as a fishfinder in the Upper Peninsula," Claude said. "Also in our party were Barton Pogue, a writer and lecturer of Upland, Ind., and James (Ike) Shaw of Gary.

"Fishing the Sturgeon river is a never-palling thrill. Every time you hit a bend you find a hole where in lurk bass, waiting and ready. For gear we used nothing more than bass hooks and live chub or shiner minnows. While we cast from the front of the boat, Judson, using a fine silk line, a small hook and a bit of work, caught our minnies from the stern. We never had a minnow in the boat that was more than a half hour out of water.

'Smallmouth are the principal yield of the Sturgeon river and the you bag a nice walleye. In the latter stream, around the backwater of the big dams, you can snake yourself a sure-enough pickerel every once in awhile."

All-'round fishing in the upper peninsula, Claude reported, was much better than last year, and surely superior to that of former years.

"Of course," he pointed out, "this man Judson knew where to take us. Even in Escanaba, where hans out, he has the reputation of a nonpareil."

William Farquaharson, the Gary Land's chief engineer, joined the Moore-Pogue-Shaw trio for several days and proved he was no chequake by taking five nice smallmouth out of the Sturgeon in an afternoon's fishing, the catch averaging 3½ pounds per specimen.

"We seldom took a bass scaling less than three pounds," Claude bragged, "and my 20-incher made the springs squawk at four and a half.

"Catching a fish like that is a thrill that's well worth waiting for nearly a year, I can tell you! And those Upper Peninsula bass—coming as they do out of cold, rock-bottom water—are fit for the table of the most persnickety gourmet, Pontus Heintz not excepted."

Claude also worked Thunder and Indian lakes, situated northwest of Manistique in the heart of the Hiawatha national forest, during his vacation, harvesting an abundance of nice size rock bass, bluegills and pickerel.

Guide Judson, whose advertisements Scrapbook readers may have read from time to time this summer in the Post-Tribune, specializes on trips out of Escanaba in which it is not requisite for the customers to bring along any tackle or duffle whatsoever. You report 'in the skin" so they speak, and John fits you out from stem to stern, practically pledging you the time of your life on lakes and streams whose piney picturesqueness time will find it hard to blot out of your mind.

2 CCC CAMPS BEING SET UP

Will Be Established at Sandstrom Lake and Garth

Advance parties for the establishment of Civilian Conservation Corps camps at Garth and Sandstrom's Lake in Delta county arrived yesterday.

The Ensign CCC camp has been located at Garth due to the inability to get water conveniently from the original location near Maywood. The other camp will be near Sandstrom Lake in the center of the Bay de Noc peninsula.

Two contingents of CCC boys will arrive this week and will occupy temporary tent quarters until barracks are built.

OLD LOGGING TOOLS SHOWN

Shrine Established in Hartwick Pines State Forest

A shrine to "King Pine" and the early lumbermen of Michigan has been constructed in Hartwick Pines State Park northeast of Grayling in the form of a typical lumberman's camp, containing replicas of a camp mess hall, kitchen and workshop.

The buildings are of log construction and were built by CCC men under authorization of the National Parks Service and the Department of Conservation. The Parks Division of the Department intends to maintain them as a logging-camp museum and is desirous of obtaining relics of the lumbering industry for exhibition.

Old lumbermen of Michigan are asked by W. J. Kingscott, state park superintendent, to make contributions to the museum. Among the articles being sought are: Typical old cooking utensils, logging tools, such as saws, peavies, axes, pike poles, skidding tongs, leather bellows, watering sleighs, four-foot dinner horns and camp heating stoves and cooking ranges.

Any article which may commonly have been found in the early lumber camps would be gratefully received, Mr. Kingscott said.

The museum is unique in Michigan in that the buildings were designed and built after the plans of a typical logging camp and already contain many old relics. It is located near the stand of virgin pine timber, which is one of the principal attractions of the park. The buildings are complete and are now open to visitors.

Hartwick Pines State Park was recently dedicated to Major Edward E. Hartwick, who died in France during the World War and whose widow presented the land to the Department of Conservation.

LABOR DAY
1935

MAKE YOUR "LABOR DAYS"
profitable

Whether you work for a weekly wage, a monthly salary, or a yearly profit, the net reward of your labor is what you keep for yourself after deducting necessary expenses.

Unless you plan ahead, there's usually nothing left to keep. A sound method is to deduct "yours" first, and to put it into a Savings Account with this Bank at regular intervals as you are paid.

In this way ,you make a profit on your own efforts and build a surplus to meet the future.

And compound interest adds still more to your "profits on yourself."

Bernadette Boyle Bride in Lovely Fall Ceremony

St. George's church of Bark River was the setting of one of the most beautiful weddings of the fall season Saturday, the marriage of Mary Bernadette Boyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Boyle of Bark River, and Friedrich Schmitt of this city, son of Joseph Schmitt, of Cologne, Germany.

The ceremony, which took place at a nuptial high mass at 8 o'clock was performed by Rev. Fr. Thomas Drengacz, of Perronville. Rev. Fr. Joseph D. Breault, pastor of St. George's church, was present in the sanctuary.

Flowers in the shades of the season, deep purple and golden yellow were used in the decorations in the church. Vases of yellow gladioli, purple and lavender asters, marigolds, liatris and stevia were arranged with the lighted altar candles, and at either side of the sanctuary were large ivory wicker standard baskets of gladioli of orchid and yellow, purple asters, liatris, marigolds and stevia, tied with maline and satin ribbon of golden yellow and purple.

The music of the nuptial mass was sung by the choir of St. George's church with Mrs. E. J. Bergman, jr., organist, and Mrs. Otto Perket and Mrs. Bergman, soloists. The beautiful "Ave Maria" of Roswig, was sung as a duet by Mrs. Perket and Mrs. Bergman. The traditional Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin" was played by Mrs. Bergman as the processional, and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as the recessional at the close of the mass.

Enters With Father

The bride, preceded by her maid of honor, Miss Denise Quinlan of Soperton, Wis., entered with her father, who gave her in marriage, while the bridegroom, and his attendant, Dr. Francis Boyle of East Troy, Wis., entered from the side, and awaited her at the sanctuary steps.

The bride was lovely in fall model of royal blue velvet, with floor length skirt, completed by a velvet jacket, with full elbow length sleeves, its lining of silver metallic cloth, extending into a tailored collar. Silver slippers, and a cluster of gardenias, which she wore in her hair, completed her costume. Her maid of honor was gowned in a directoire model of pansy velvet, floor length, with a jacket of the same material, and she also wore a cluster of gardenias in her hair.

Mrs. Boyle, mother of the bride, wore a becoming ensemble of navy blue crepe, with navy accessories, and a shoulder corsage of pink roses and snapdragons.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to twenty-eight guests at Peterson's Tea Room, Ford River. Like colors, yellow and purple, were used in the table decorations. Centering the table was the bride's cake, with its tiny bride and bridegroom, this motif repeated in the place cards, and at either side, arranged with tall tapers, were low silver bowls of Joanna Hill roses, lavender asters and yellow gladioli.

Motoring Through Canada

The young people left later in the day on a honeymoon motor trip through Canada. They will be at home after September 15, at 227 Ogden avenue. The bride for traveling, wore a brown wool suit with autumn green trim, and green accessories.

The bride is a graduate of Escanaba high school and of Northern State Teachers college, Marquette, and has been teaching in the Webster school in this city. Mr. Schmitt, who is a graduate of the University of Bown, Cologne, Germany, is with the International Harvester company.

At a pretty wedding of the early fall season, which took place at high noon Saturday, Gertrude Margaret Soper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Soper of this city, Old State Road, formerly of 217 South Sixteenth street, became the bride of Eddie John Danielson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Danielson of 326 North Cedar street, Manistique.

She carried a bride's bouquet of sweetheart roses and pink snapdragons. Her bridesmaid wore a dress of brown satin and crepe with brown accessories and she carried Talisman roses and bronze snapdragons.

A wedding dinner was served to members of the bridal party and the immediate family groups at one o'clock at the Delta Hotel with covers for fifteen guests. The wedding cake formed the central note of the table decorations, and at either side of it were arranged yellow and white gladioli and yellow tapers, while the nut baskets at each place repeated the colors, yellow and green.

The young people left later in the day on a wedding trip during which they are motoring through Canada. They will make their home in Williamston, Mich., for the present. The bride, for traveling, wore a modish tailleur of rush rabbit cloth with brown accessories and a corsage of bronze snapdragons centered with a gardenia.

WHAT credit accures to fine craftsmen? Does it occur to you to marvel at the precision of your watch, or to be grateful for the reassuring perfection of your car . . . Here are men assembling an airplane engine. You know that they are building into that engine more than valves and tappets, timing gears and cotter pins. They are building into to it their own skill and infinite patience and loyalty — a devotion to an ideal, an expression of their pride. It is a pride that must be able to say to itself, when the whistle blows "Good work!"

CUBS CAPTURE JUNIOR TITLE

Thrilling Rallies Feature Championship Game

In a bitterly fought battle that proved a thriller from start to finish, the Cubs annexed the city junior soft ball title by defeating the Silk Sox, 11 to 10. The game went nine innings and was featured by several rallies.

The game was sent into extra innings when the Sox deadlocked the count at 6-all in the first of the seventh. Coming into the 9th the Sox combed Ducheney's offerings for three hits which combined with an error gave them four runs and what looked like victory.

However, the Cubs came right back in the last of the ninth to knock Dumas from the box with a cluster of five hits good for five tallies. Ducheney helped his own cause when he hit for the circuit in the ninth with two men aboard. Brassick then sent Thompson home with the winning run.

Summary:

Silk Sox __ 201 011 104—10 16 2
Cubs _____ 031 101 005—11 13 2

Batteries: Dumas, Fitzpatrick and Rivers; Ducheney and Micheau.

Umpires: Stambulich and Damitz.

THEATRES

A wave of renewed enthusiasm for the works of the late Gene Stratton-Porter has brought the screening, during the past year, of three of her most famous novels, and has launched "A Girl of the Limberlost," first of them to reach the screen in the new cycle, to a point of popularity which has been reached by only nine other pictures during the current motion picture season.

The latest of the famous Stratton-Porter novels to be presented to American audiences is "The Keeper of the Bees," filmed by the same company which produced "A Girl of the Limberlost," and it is anticipated that this picture will be accorded the same enthusiastic reception that was given its illustrious predecessor when it plays the Rialto Theatre beginning today.

Second Feature

Actual cases, newspaper reports and official facts were the basis of "Public Hero Number 1," drama of the federal secret service and war on organized crime, showing as the second feature. It traces in detail the pursuit of a notorious public enemy in a rapid-fire story directed by J. Walter Ruben, with Lionel Parrymoe, Chester Morris, Joseph Calleia, Jean Arthur and others of note.

Miss Dorothy Lee Johnson arrived this morning from Green Bay where she attends the Badger-Green Bay Business college, to spend a few days visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson.

Features of the day's program are varied and interesting.

One of the highlights will be a speaking program at the city park in the morning at 11 o'clock during which Max Raskin, Milwaukee attorney, and Matthew Smith, Detroit, prominent labor leader and general secretary of the MESA, will be heard. Both men are able speakers and it is expected that a large throng will be on hand to hear their messages. Wm. Praiss, Sr., will serve as chairman. In the event of inclement weather the addresses will be given in the Rialto Theatre, it was stated.

The celebration will open in the morning at 9 o'clock with a mammoth parade. The column will form at Delta avenue and Sixth street and will parade the business district and then down Central avenue to the park. Prizes are being offered for the best and most comically decorated floats.

Efforts have also been extended to secure several of the CCC truck displays which formed a part of the conservation day parade at Escanaba last week and which attracted most attention for the local parade.

Starting at 1:15 o'clock in the afternoon there will be a program of sports events run off on Delta avenue between Seventh and Tenth streets. Included are running races, a bicycle race and a greased pig "rassle."

A water fight between two picked teams of Volunteer firemen is to be staged at the foot of Tenth street at 6:30 o'clock in the evening and it will be followed by a tug-of-war between teams from the United Workers and the Lumbermen's union.

At 7:30 o'clock there is to be a boxing exhibition in the city park. Three matches have been arranged, it was announced, headed by a clash between Joe and Roy Anderson, star leather-pushers of this city.

From 8 to 9 o'clock there will be a concert in the park by the WOW band of Manistique.

Awarding of the model home will be made in front of the A. T. Sohlberg office on Delta avenue at 9 o'clock.

All teachers of the public school system will attend a general teachers' meeting in room 25 of the Central school building on Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock. This meeting will be followed by group meetings of the various teachers in their respective school buildings.

The daily schedule of classes is as follows:

Grades one to six inclusive—8:45 to 11:30 a. m.; 1 to 4 p. m.

Kindergarten—8:45 to 11 a. m. at Lincoln and Lakeside schools and 1 to 3 p. m. at the Central school.

In accordance with a ruling made by the board of education last spring, children will not be admitted to the sub-primary or kindergarten classes unless they have attained the age of five years at the time that school opens.

On the first day of school, all Lincoln and Lakeside children wishing to attend the kindergarten will report in the morning at their respective buildings. The Central kindergarten children will report at 1 p. m. The Riverside children of kindergarten age will be picked up at the Riverside school building at 12:45 and transported to the Central school.

All pupils entering the junior high school for the first time are required to make a deposit of a dollar before being entitled to free textbooks. Students entering the senior high school for the first time are required to make a deposit of two dollars in order to receive the text books. LABOR DAY

Once again, throughout the nation, a day is set aside to honor labor. To a sound bank such a day is of necessity an important one.

It is a day that causes us to reflect on the close relationship between labor and the banks that serve it. Without the credit of our banking system there could be no industrial organization as we know it today, no transportation comparable with that we enjoy today, no warehousing facilities which make possible modern methods of production and distribution.

We take pride in being able to say sincerely that we have done our part in helping to build the prestige and advantages which labor enjoys in this community.

All teachers of the public school system will attend a general teachers' meeting in room 25 of the Central school building on Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock. This meeting will be followed by group meetings of the various teachers in their respective school buildings.

The daily schedule of classes is as follows:

Grades one to six inclusive—8:45 to 11:30 a. m.; 1 to 4 p. m.

Kindergarten—8:45 to 11 a. m. at Lincoln and Lakeside schools and 1 to 3 p. m. at the Central school.

In accordance with a ruling made by the board of education last spring, children will not be admitted to the sub-primary or kindergarten classes unless they have attained the age of five years at the time that school opens.

On the first day of school, all Lincoln and Lakeside children wishing to attend the kindergarten will report in the morning at their respective buildings. The Central kindergarten children will report at 1 p. m. The Riverside children of kindergarten age will be picked up at the Riverside school building at 12:45 and transported to the Central school.

All pupils entering the junior high school for the first time are required to make a deposit of a dollar before being entitled to free textbooks. Students entering the senior high school for the first time are required to make a deposit of two dollars in order to receive the text books. Other students entering must bring their deposit balance up to one dollar in junior high school and two dollars in the senior high school.

LABOR DAY

Once again, throughout the nation, a day is set aside to honor labor. To a sound bank such a day is of necessity an important one.

It is a day that causes us to reflect on the close relationship between labor and the banks that serve it. Without the credit of our banking system there could be no industrial organization as we know it today, no transportation comparable with that we enjoy today, no warehousing facilities which make possible modern methods of production and distribution.

We take pride in being able to say sincerely that we have done our part in helping to build the prestige and advantages which labor enjoys in this community.

BY FRANK MAC MILLEN
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Shares perked up fractions to more than a point in slow trading on the New York stock exchange today.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the market scored a gain of .3 of a point, closing at 48.0. Transfers totalled 491,380 shares, the smallest volume since July 20. Many traders deserted the boardrooms yesterday for an early start on the Labor Day holiday.

Observers said the same forces were at work that have produced a demand for shares in recent weeks; comparatively satisfactory business news, the push of idle money in search of profitable employment and a hopeful view of the long-term pull held by investors.

The financial district buzzed with discussion of the report that Anglo-American interests had acquired substantial oil and mineral concessions in Ethiopia, but petroleum company shares, while steady, were not unusually active.

Although the great majority of stocks confined their gains to fractions, there was a good-sized handful of issues which turned in gains of 1 or more points. These included American Telephone at 136½, Auburn at 34 3-8, Briggs Manufacturing at 43, Gamewell at 9½, Johns-Manville at 66½, Kelsey Hayes "A" and "B" at 20½ and 18 7-8 respectively, National Steel at 66, Paramount at 10½, Union Pacific at 100½ and Western Union at 46 3-8.

At 72¼ Case had a gain of 3½s, while Columbia Pictures voting trust certificates ran up 2¼ to 72.

A few utility preferred issues advanced from 1 to 3 points including American Power & Light, Electric Power & Light and Engineers Public Service.

Advances of fractions to about a point were recorded by American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share common, United Gas preferred, Sunshine Mining, Sherwin Williams, Hiram Walker and American Hard Rubber.

Transfers approximated 181,000 shares compared with the record turnover of 393,000 shares a week ago.

BY G. A. PHILLIPS
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Trading was too light to establish a definite trend on the corporate bond market today. U. S. governments were mixed, 4-32nds higher to 4-32nds lower.

Transfers of $3,306,000, par value, were the smallest for any two-hour session in several months. Many of the street's prominent bond brokers and traders were away from their offices with an early start on the Labor Day holiday, and what business there was transacted was mostly in the nature of evening up accounts for the extended shutdown.

The main body of corporate bonds held within arm's reach of Friday's finals throughout the session and closed mixed. Railroad issues, particularly those of the lower-priced brackets, were a trifle better and some of the utilities picked up, but industrials were lifeless and drifted a shade lower. Foreign bonds were dull and without feature except for slight improvement in Italians.

Better than average movements included Erie 4s, up 1 1-8 at 99 1-8; Murray Body 6½s, up 2½ at 142½; New Haven 4½s, off 1¼ at 33¼; Paramount-Famous-Players 6s, up 3 at 105 and Southern Railway, Memphis division, 5s, off 3 7-8 at 69. American Type Founders 6s were active again and got up 1½ points but conceded most of it before the close.

The Associated Press averages ranged from .2 of a point higher to .1 of a point lower.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Aug. 31—Wheat prices rallied more than a cent a bushel today, the first pronounced upturn of the market in a week, stimulated by bullish implications of a private crop estimate indicating a further serious loss in wheat production in the last month.

Unexpected buying strength appeared in the pit despite the restraining influence of the approaching Labor Day holiday, with many traders preferring to even up accounts rather than commit themselves. Then, too, developments over the holiday, including the expected announcement of the minimum price to be paid Canadian growers through the wheat board, were awaited.

Wheat closed 1 to 1 1-8 cents higher compared with the previous finish, December 89 3-4 to 89 7-8, and corn was 3-8 to 7-8 up, December 57½ to 57 5-8. Oats were ¼ lower to 1-8 higher, rye ½ to 3-4 up, and barley ½ to 1 down.

It was the last trading day before the delivery period on September contracts, and this, coupled with the fact that other crop estimates will be released Wednesday, tended to restrict trade. The market was steady at the opening but wheat soon surged upward, some buying being attributed to shorts and milling interests.

Other leading grains firmed with wheat but not before September and May oats and rye declined fractionally to new lows for the season. The crop estimate indicated a reduction of 128,000,000 bushels in corn and 27,000,000 bushels in oats from the August 1 government forecast.

Provisions were firm.

AUTO INDUSTRY IS OPTIMISTIC

Plans Best Year Since Collapse; Getting Flying Start

BY DAVID J. WILKIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Detroit, Aug. 31.—The automobile industry is planning to top off its best production year since the collapse of 1929 by getting a flying start on next year's business. This is to be accomplished by getting into production on next year's types from eight to 12 weeks earlier than has been the custom since buying power froze up more than five years ago.

There has been considerable discussion in trade circles as to the effect earlier new model work this year may have upon factory activity next March and April, but the general opinion among leading producers appears to be that the tendency will be chiefly to level off employment through the winter months and that the production peak, as usual, will come in April and May.

Change Dates

It is admitted throughout the executive branch of the motorcar industry that a complete levelling off of employment peaks and valleys cannot be accomplished by merely changing the date for the swing-over to new model work. Most of the executives seem agreed, however, that by advancing the date for introducing new types and gauging production activity more rigidly much can be done to the advantage of the workers during the mid-winter months when living costs are higher.

Already a number of plants have completed the installation of machinery for new model output and have resumed operations; others are closed at present and still more are winding up output on current types preparatory to the suspension necessary for the retooling of production and assembly departments. It is significant, in connection with the suspensions, that although the companies closing down were "out of production," employment was continued in sizeable proportions in various departments.

In a number of factories men were kept at work accumulating equipment for new types and also in stocking parts for older models. It is one of the boasts of the producers that the factories can provide parts for some of the oldest models still in operation. Most of the manufacturers have considered this stocking of wheels, knuckles, cylinder-block heads and other integral parts of the obsolete types as one of the best selling arguments for their newest product. As a result, something more than passing attention has been given to keeping these stocks filled while new types of motors, transmissions, gears and other units are being developed in the laboratories for models yet to come.

A striking example of what education does to decrease crime is shown in a survey of Illinois prisons. The figures show that less than 1 per cent ofr the inmate are high school graduates.

There May Be A Market

Groos Nine to Oppose Daggett at Wells Today

SOUTH DIVISION TITLE AT STAKE

Howard Green, League's Ace Hurler, Will Be On the Mound

The Groos Papermakers will face the Daggett ball club at the Wells diamond this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in a game that may decide the South Division championship. Daggett is now leading the Groos team by a full game and today's clash is the end of the schedule for both teams. If Daggett wins, they will automatically win the division title but if Groos wins, the teams will be tied again and a playoff will be necessary.

The Escanaba South Siders are winners of the North Division crown and are awaiting the selection of a champion for the other division of the Tri County league. The playoff series between the two division winners is scheduled to start next Sunday at Escanaba.

A BUSY WEEK

The Groos Papermakers will play the Grands at South Park Monday and Wednesday, Sept. 4 they will meet the Giant Collegians, traveling colored team, Manager Heidenreich announced yesterday.

Daggett will send Howard Green, the league's outstanding hurler, to the mound in an effort to clinch the bunting while Groos probably will use either Brotherton or Greenless.

One of the largest crowds of the season will be on hand to see the all important clash. Daggett's only defeat in the league was at the hands of Groos but the Papermakers dropped two of their games in the second half of the season, losing to Bark River, 1 to 0, in 12 innings, and last week to Spalding, 2 to 0.

The Papermakers plan to throw caution to the winds in an effort to break Daggett's winning streak and get back into the running for the division title. With their backs to the wall, figuratively, the Groos athletes will be a fighting ball club today but they will meet in Daggett admittedly one of the smoothest and most potent aggregations in either division.

Other South Division games today are: Bark River at Schaffer; ERA vs. Spalding at Powers, and ERA vs. Powers at Powers.

WOOD SURVIVES IN TOURNAMENT

Davis Cup Player Stages Brilliant Rally to Defeat Hall

BY BOB CAVAGNARO
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—Form came dangerously close to taking a terrific beating in the second round of the Men's National singles tennis championship today as Sidney Wood, Davis Cub alternate and former Wimbledon champion, turned a seemingly inevitable defeat into victory and escaped upset elimination that marked the passage of two foreign stars.

Seven thousand spectators looked on in consternation as Wood, America's No. 2 star and seeded fourth, stood at the cross road of his career against J. Gilbert Hall, unseeded and ranked 12th nationally, in one of the most bitterly fought matches ever waged in this Long Island inclosure.

Fans Go Wild

Wood's usually gifted racket was deplorably errant in the first two sets. Hall, on the other hand hit strong and accurately from both wings. But in the end it was only Wood's superior shotmaking and experience that enabled him to pull out a five-set decision, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

Toward the end of the match the spectators got almost completely out of hand and when Wood sent a whistling forehand across for match point thousands of cushions were tossed down into the court.

The fate that Wood narrowly escaped fell to the lot of Christian Boussus, France's No. 1 and third seeded foreigner, and Eskell D. Andrews of New Zealand, seeded seventh. The Frenchman lost to Robert Harmon of Oakland, Calif., 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-1, while Andrews' elimination was accounted for by Martin Buxby of Miami, Fla., 5-7, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

On the brighter side, Fred J. Perry began defense of the crown he won in 1933 and again last year, by trouncing Arthur S. Fowler of Pleasantville, N. Y., 6-3, 6-2, 6-1. His chief American rivals, Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and Don Budge of Oakland, Calif., moved into the third round with him.

Perry gave very little attention to the match, because most of the time he looked in the direction of his reported fiancee, Helen Vinson, American actress, who sat in the stands.

Budge turned in one of the cleanest wins of the day, defeating Donald Hawley of Orange, N. J., 6-1, 6-0, 6-1, while Allison was almost as decisive in winning, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 from Tom Flynn of Bayside, L. I.

Yankees Win Twice From Philadelphia To Gain On Tigers

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (AP)—The effective elbowing of lean Lefty Gomez and 265-pound Walter Brown enabled the Yankees to take a doubleheader from the Athletics today, 6 to 2 and 3 to 1, and ran the A's losing streak to six straight.

Gomez pitched five-hit ball in the opener to record his 100th major league victory with the effective aid of Lou Gehrig. Lou broke a tie with a double in the eighth with the bases loaded and knocked in one other run. George Blaeholder gave the Yanks only seven hits but made a couple of costly errors.

Brown got the better of Young Carl Doyle in the afterpiece although the A's had a 7-6 edge in the hitting. Pinky Higgins' homer in the fourth was the only Philadelphia run.

Brooklyn Defeats Boston Braves, 5-2

Boston, Aug. 31 (AP)—Tom Baker, Brooklyn's 20-year old right hander from Grand Prairie, Tex., won his first major league game today as the Dodgers beat the Braves 5 to 2.

Baker neither started nor finished the contest but shut out the tail enders through most of it. George Earnshaw, who opened for the Dodgers, suffered a broken little finger on his right hand when he knocked down Les Mallon's liner in the second inning. Baker relieved him and hurled until the ninth when he loaded the bases with none out and Emil Leonard was called in to snuff out the rally. Earnshaw may not be able to pitch again this season.

The Dodgers pounded Deacon Danny MacFayden for two runs in the fourth to take the lead after Bill Urbanski hit a Boston homer in the first then put the game away with a three-run rally in the sixth.

Diamondball Title Will Be Decided Here Today

The city diamondball championship will be settled today in a title game scheduled at six o'clock at the No. 2 diamond. At 10:30 this morning, however, the Colonials and Spads will battle to decide which team wins the American league bunting and the right to enter the finals with the Old Timers' league champs—the Northerns. Ed Gunkel will umpire the Colonials-Spad contest.

The winner of the Colonial-Spad game automatically moves into the championship round while the losers of that game will play the K. of C. for third and fourth place honors at five o'clock. The championship game will follow immediately. Van Effen and Cass will officiate the final two games.

The city champions will receive a box of cigars. The runnersup also will get a box of cigars and two cartons of cigarettes will go to the third place team, with one carton of cigarettes to fourth place winners.

The American league player and the Old Timer's league player making the most number of hits in the tournament will each get a beautiful pen and pencil set and the American league and Old Timer's league players making the most home runs also will each win a polo shirt.

A collection will be taken at each of the games to help defray expenses of the tournament, including the balls and umpires fees.

Vern Kennedy Hurls No Hit, No-Run Game

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP)—A no-hit no-run game—the first in the major leagues since Sept. 21, 1934 and the first in the American circuit in four years—today admitted twenty-six year old Vernon Kennedy of the Chicago White Sox to baseball's hall of fame. He blanked the third-place Cleveland Indians, 5 to 0.

Only four Indians reached first base, all on passes. Kennedy completed his brilliant performance by striking out Joe Vosmik, the league's leading hitter, with the count 3 and 2 and Earl Averill, who had walked, on first base.

There were only two hard hit balls during the entire contest, Al Simmons making a spectacular diving catch of Galatzer's hard smash in the ninth and Washington taking a line drive off the bat of Roy Hughes in the eighth.

Earned His Victory

Paul Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals pitched the last no-hitter in the major leagues, stopping the Brooklyn Dodgers without a safety last September. The last American league hurler to turn the trick was Bob Burke, Washington southpaw, who beat the Boston Red Sox on Aug. 8, 1931.

By his outstanding performance Kennedy, who drove in three runs when he tripled with the bases full in the sixth inning, became the first White Sox pitcher ever to hurl a no-hit game in Comiskey Park.

Kennedy truly earned his no-hitter, Cleveland gave him nothing. Manager Steve O'Neill sent in a left handed pinch hitter for Pitcher Willis Hudlin at the start of the ninth. The pinch hitter, Walter Carson, took a third strike. Simmons then came through with his sparkling catch on Galatzer, after which Kennedy dealt out his fourth pass of the game to Averill. That brought Joe Vosmik, the league's leading hitter, to the plate. Vosmik took five pitches to work the count to three and two. The next pitch cut the inside corner to end the game.

Only one Indian passed first base. Hughes, who forced Phillips, who had walked to open the third, stole second. He got no farther.

Practically unexerted on defense, because of Kennedy's proficiency, the Sox snapped out of it on offense and found Hudlin for ten hits. Singles by Conlan and Appling, sandwiched around an out, gave Kennedy the lone run he needed for victory in the first inning.

The victory was Kennedy's 10th of the season as against seven defeats.

Washington Trims Boston Sox, 3 to 1

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Behind Jack Russell's four-hit pitching, the Washington Senators today won the first of a two-game series with the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 1.

The Senators scored twice in the sixth. With the bases loaded Myer scored on Powell's infield hit when Cacher Rick Ferrell failed to touch the plate on the throw home. Miles tallied on a longfly by Kress. Washington scored another in the seventh when Myer tripled to drive in Kuhel.

The Red Sox scored their only run in the first inning when Almada came in on a passed ball. Earl Whitehill, who started on the mound for Washington, protested so loudly that Almada had failed to touch the plate that Umpire Dinneen ejected him from the game and Russell pitched to Ferrell, the last Boston man in the first inning.

CUBS TRIMMED BY BUCS, 5 TO 0

Pittsburgh Runs up 10th Straight Victory, Get 11 Solid Hits

Pittsburgh, Aug. 31.—The suddenly inspired Pittsburgh Buccaneers kept up their galloping pace down the National League pennant race today by bowling over the Chicago Cubs 5 to 0 for their tenth consecutive triumph.

Six of these victories have been taken from the pacemaking Giants, Cardinals and Cubs while the Pirates have lost only four games in their last 20. They now are 3½ games behind Chicago in third place, and 5 behind New York.

Behind such pitching as their Giant southpaw, Ralph Birkofer, was turning in, Pittsburgh clinched the game in the early innings. They counted in the first frame when Woodie Jensen singled moved to third on outs and counted on a passed ball.

Bud Hafey Doubles

Two more runs came in the third. Bud Hafey, subbing in center field for the crippled Lloyd Waner, doubled off the fence in left. Arky Vaughan scorched a single to center, counting the rookie. The league's leading batter moved to second on Suhr's single and scooted home while the Cubs were trying a double play on Manager Traynor's grounder to Herman.

Meanwhile "Birkie" pitched himself out of two bad spots and held the Cubs well in check.

Hafey scored a second time in the fifth, singling and moving to third on outs and counting on Billy Herman's boot of Suhr's hard hit grounder. Jensen scored the final marker. He singled, went to second on a wild pitch by French, who tried to nap him at first, and third on P. Waner's infield hit. Vaughan's long fly sent him home.

GIANTS CRUSH PHILLIES, 9-3

New Yorkers Keep Pace In National League Pennant Race

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Giants continued to slash into the dwindling lead of the St. Louis Cardinals today when they belted over the Phillies 9 to 3 in the opening game of their series.

The triumph put the Giants only a half game behind the Cards pending the outcome of the St. Louis-Cincinnati floodlight encounter tonight with a chance to tie for the lead should the Cards lose.

Hal Schumacher had an easy time ringing up his 18th victory of the season as his mates belabored three pitchers for 16 blows. Handsome Hal had a shutout in his grasp going into the ninth inning. He had allowed only four hits in the first eight frames and only one Philly reached third. Then John Moore and Dolph Camilli nicked him for singles and Johnny Vergez, the former Giant, belted a home run into the left field stand.

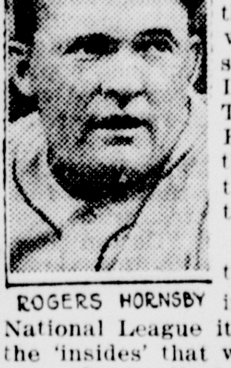
Hornsby Picks Tigers to Win World Series

St. Louis, Aug. 31 (AP)—Rogers Hornsby, who gets a good perspective from his bunk in the basement of the American League, tonight picked the Cardinals to win the National League pennant, and the Detroit Tigers to win the world series.

The Rajah, whose Browns just took a sound thumping from the Tigers in their pennant spree, recovered sufficiently to remark, "I believe this year's series will go six or seven games, and I look for the Tigers to win." Experience, he thinks, turned the trick for Detroit.



ROGERS HORNSBY

"In a race of the kind now being staged in the National League its the team with the 'insides' that wins, and that is what the Cardinals have got. Then the schedule which brings them home Monday and keeps them home for the remainder of the season is all in their favor."

The former boss of the Chicago Cubs nodded this year's edition into third place.

"True, the Cubs also will be at home but, in my opinion, the real sprint for the flag will be between the Redbirds and the Giants."

Here's why the American League's David Harum picks his fellowtownsmen for the National pennant:

"The Cardinals' punch is greater than that of any of their flag rivals, and after all a great offense will make up for a mediocre defense. And I don't say the Cardinals' defense is mediocre either."

But here's why he picks the Tigers as the next world champions:

"With an added year of experience they're not likely to be nervous this year. We've played the Tigers quite a few games and we can notice that they are much tougher this year. Cochrane has welded some fine individuals into a fine team."

BIG SIX STANDINGS

(By The Associated Press)

Buddy Myer of Washington supplanted Lou Gehrig of the Yankees as the last man in the Big Six standing yesterday when he hit safely twice in three attempts against the Red Sox. That added two points to Myer's average while Gehrig, who made only two hits in eight attempts, dropped two points. Arky Vaughan drew another point nearer to his .400 goal when he smacked two safeties in four times up to bring his mark to .399. Joe Vosmik, one of the victims of Vernon Kennedy's no-hit pitching, lost two points while Hank Greenberg and Gabby Hartnett dropped one each.

DETROIT TRIMS BROWNS, 5 TO 1

Crowder in Fine Form; Schoolboy to Pitch Series Finale

St. Louis, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers demonstrated some championship batting and fielding behind Alvin Crowder today and romped off with the third game of the St. Louis series, 5 to 1.

But despite the victory, Detroit lost half a game to the Yankees who won a twin bill from the Athletics.

Schoolboy Rowe was the original choice to oppose the rejuvenated Brownies but Mickey shifted his plans just before game time and held the Schoolboy out until the series finale on Sunday. Today's triumph gave Crowder his 16th win of the season and put the Bengals one up in the current series.

The General gave up 10 hits but he put on the pressure with men on bases and dished up seven scoreless innings before the Browns got their lone run.

Superb Control

In nearly every inning St. Louis put runners on but they just couldn't nick Crowder when it would have been beneficial to their cause. The General had superb control, walking only one man and mixing his deliveries to achieve the maximum results from his labors.

There were two men out in the eighth inning before the Browns sent a runner all the way around. Lary then doubled to left, Burns drew the only pass Crowder issued and Solters beat out an infeild single to fill the bases. Coleman cracked a single to left and Lary scored but Crowder disposed of West on a grounder to Gehringer.

The Tiger attack was functioning in high gear, timely hits resounding from Bengal bats at important junctures. As in the first two games Detroit profited from the generosity of St. Louis pitchers. Jack Knott, the starting pitcher, issued six free tickets, three of them being converted into scores.

SPUD CONTROL IRKS FARMERS

New Jersey Growers Are Filing Protests to White House

BY PAUL MAY

Washington, D. C., Aug. 31.—As the Agricultural Administration avowed its intention of going ahead with the potato control program despite success of Senator Huey Long's filibuster in preventing appropriation of funds for administration of the potato control act, it was learned today that protests against the program are beginning to pile up at the White House.

Open defiance is the keynote of many of these protests. A good example is the communication forwarded to President Roosevelt by the potato growers of Hunterdon County, N. J., which concludes:

"We shall produce on our own land such potatoes as we may wish to produce, and dispose of them in such manner as we deem proper. And just as an earlier generation of Americans, not only at Boston, but at Greenwich, in Salem County, New Jersey, resisted an arbitrary and unjust law enacted for their government by the British parliament, so will we resist this Potato Control Law."

Plans for enforcement of the act may be divided into two groups—those which have been announced by the AAA, and those of the Internal Revenue Bureau, which have not been announced and are, in fact, being kept very quiet.

Hutson Named Director

The AAA has named a director for the program (John B. Hutson, at present chief of the division of tobacco, rice, sugar, and peanuts) and has announced that funds will be transferred from other sources to keep the work going until the next session of Congress. The task of setting quotas, the first big job under the Act, and which must be completed by the end of October, will rest largely on present AAA field workers and officials of the Agricultural Extension Service, under present plans. The control program becomes effective December 1. After that date, all potatoes sold or marketed in the United States will be required to be packed in closed containers prescribed by the government and which must carry revenue stamps. Potatoes within the quota set for their producer will carry tax stamps at the rate of three-fourths of a cent per pound.

Setting the quotas is the primary task of the AAA. After that, the Revenue Bureau will step in.

Looking for Revenue

Though officials of this bureau refuse to discuss the question, they are already casting about for means by which revenue collectors' staffs can be augmented, possible with special deputies, to provide for a check-up and enforcement of the potato tax. A plan for combatting the potato bootlegger, appearance of which is considered inescapable, is also in process of formulation. Revenue officials are reported divided in two camps on the question of the best method of enforcement. One view is that recourse only to action against the actual vendor of illicit potatoes will not stamp out the bootleg potato traffic, whereas recourse to that section of the law which makes the buyer of unstamped spuds equally guilty with the seller will coerce prospective bootleg customers into boycotting the bootlegger. Opponents of this view hold that any attempt to enforce the penalties (as high as $1,000 for a first offense) provided by the bill for purchasers of illicit potatoes would stir up such popular resentment that continued enforcement of the Act would be virtually impossible.

Receipt by the White House of such ultimatums as that from the New Jersey growers, with its threat of a second "Boston Tea Party," lends force to this view.

AAA officials admit this is the most difficult control program they have ever attempted. It is certain, however, that a conscientious effort to enforce the act will be made. With the signature of the President, it became law, and both AAA and Internal Revenue officials to administer it as best they can.

Wilderness Park Pet Bear Is Shot

Because he was not afraid of people and liked to make friends, the camp bear of Wilderness State park has come to grief. He was shot by a farmer, who thought he was trying to invade his home.

The bear was released from his cage near the CCC camp in the park early this summer. Sometime later he encountered a survey group of CCC men from camp, and approached gleefully. When his former camp-mates took to convenient trees, the bear turned his attention to their transit and when he left the instrument was a wreck.
